TELEGRAMS FROM FREDERICK.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25.

Your special correspondent, Mr. F. HENRY, sends the following to this Bureau:

FREDERICK, Thursday, June 25—9 A. M.

That the rebels are on this side of the Potomac in strong force is now an established fact. The mystery which for the past two weeks has enshrouded the movements of the rebel army in the Shenandoah Valley is at last dispelled, and Lee's real intentions are unmasked. There is no doubt that more than one-half of Lee's army is now on Maryland soil, and advancing in three columns into Pennsylvania. Each advancing column is followed by immense wagon trains, most of which are empty. Gen. EWELL commands in person the centre advancing column. He is unable to walk without crutches. He leads his command in a carriage.

Extra BILLY SMITH, reported in the Richmond papers as being killed at Winchester, is in command of a brigade in EWELL's corps. He was seen, in full feather, in Hagerstown yesterday.

The wagon train which accommodated the centre column numbered several hundred wagons, the majority of which were marked U. S., with the names of the divisions or brigades from which they were captured.

The rebel division which crossed at Hancock, and is now operating in the vicinity of Mercersburgh, is commanded by BRADLEY T. JOHNSON, the renegade Marylander.

The rebels crossed the river at four points, viz.: Williamsport, Hancock, Shepardstown, and Antietam Ford. The entire rebel force in Maryland yesterday morning was estimated at thirty-five thousand men, infantry, cavalry, and artillery.

Notwithstanding Gen. EWELL's orders commanding his troops to respect the property of all Marylanders, foraging parties are scouring the country in every direction, seizing all the horses and cattle they can lay hands on. Several thousand head of cattle and a large number of horses have been gobbled by the rebels in Washington County alone. The neighboring counties are suffering in like manner. Most of the cattle have been driven across the river into Virginia, to feed that portion of Lee's army which still remains on the other side.

FREDERICK, Thursday, June 25—11 A. M.

Several Union men just arrived from Hagerstown, via Boonsboro, say that another rebel force of ten thousand men arrived there yesterday afternoon from Williamsport. Gen. EWELL commands, in person, the centre advancing column. It is believed in Hagerstown that Lee's whole army is crossing at Shepardstown and Williamsport. The force which arrived at Hagerstown yesterday afternoon was infantry and artillery, of which there were thirty pieces.

There were several thousand men at Boonsboro last night. Five miles out of Frederick they met now and of the enemy's cavalry scouts.

Most of the prominent Union people have already left Frederick, and others are leaving.

FREDERICK, Md., Wednesday, June 24.

Gens. Lee and LONGSTREET were both at Winchester on Friday last with 100,000 men. They intended to cross the Potomac in two days.

Large rebel trains, wagons, provisions, tents, etc., were moving North through Hagerstown, Martinsburgh and Boonsboro' on Sunday last.

Gen. RODES' rebel division, 10,000 strong, left Hagerstown on Tuesday for Chambersburgh.

Gen. JOHNSON's rebel division, 12,000 strong, with thirteen pieces of artillery, crossed at Shepherdstown on Sunday. One half this force was at Boonsboro on Monday, and left on Tuesday for the North. The other half went to Williamsport.

The aqueduct at Williamsport has been blown up by the rebels, and the bridges over Black Creek, Sheply Creek, Sir John's Run, Green Spring Run and South Branch have been destroyed. One span of the North Branch Bridge was also been destroyed.

It is generally believed that the greater part of Gen. Lee's army crossed over into Maryland since last Friday, at Antietam, Shepherdstown and Williamsport.

TELEGRAMS FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, June 25.

The information received here this morning from Western Maryland is to the following purport:

Gen. LEE is said to have passed through Winchester on Friday. The entire rebel army was then in motion, claiming to be 100,000 strong. EWELL was at Hagerstown on Monday, and his corps marched on Tuesday for Pennsylvania. LONGSTREET's forces were about crossing the Potomac, and were to be on this side by Wednesday.

The rebel programme, according to the representations of a highly intelligent sympathizer, just from Western Maryland, is, that HILL's forces were to occupy Gen. HOOKER's attention until the main body of the rebel army were well on their way; that the rebel army would then move rapidly North, having in the meanwhile supplied themselves with fresh horses from Maryland and Pennsylvania. The rebels expected to capture Harrisburgh almost without opposition, and move at once on Philadelphia.

This extravagant programme was seriously related by the gentleman in question to a loyal gentleman here, who was supposed by the relator to be rather indifferent to the success of the Union cause.

The relator further says that all the rebel officers have been newly uniformed and equipped, and their advance force made to present a very fine appearance. EWELL told the men to pay liberally for everything, and that, although the people might turn up their noses at rebel money now, they would soon be glad to get it.

These representations are sent for what they may be worth. However extravagant and sensation-like they may appear, they are a truthful representation of the hopes and expectations of intelligent and thinking rebels.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, June 25.

It is reported through various channels that Gen. LEE and his Staff crossed the Potomac yesterday. There are various rumors in connection with rebel movements, but not sufficiently definite to be worth repeating. In regard to our own movements, it is sufficient to say our authorities are not idle.

TELEGRAMS FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25.

The Republican, in an extra to-day, says:

"A gentleman arrived here this morning who left Hagerstown at 6 o'clock yesterday (Wednesday) morning. He saw EWELL's forces, composing the left wing of Lee's army, pass through that place. The head of the column entered Hagerstown on Tuesday morning, and moved directly through to Pennsylvania. The rear of the column, understood to belong to EWELL, did not pass through the place until that night. This force was estimated to be from 30,000 to 35,000 strong. The troops did very little damage besides seizing all the horses they could find. Our informant says when he left Hagerstown yesterday morning, it was understood that LONGSTREET, in command of the right wing of Lee's army, was then crossing the Potomac below Williamsport. The main body of A. P. HILL's forces, comprising the centre of Lee's army, was understood yesterday to be somewhere between Winchester and Martinsburgh, moving toward the river. To-day we have no doubt, from all the information we have gathered, that the whole of EWELL's column is in Pennsylvania, not far from Chambersburgh. The gentleman who saw EWELL's troops, says they had with them a very large number of wagons. From this fact, they intend to gather all the supplies they can find."

TELEGRAMS FROM HARRISBURGH,

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Thursday, June 25.

At last accounts the enemy was within four miles of Carlisle. Gen. KNIPE had his little band, comprising the Eighth and Seventy-first New-York infantry, and a portion of the First New-York and Sixth Maryland cavalry, drawn up in line of battle a short distance west of the town. Every one expected an attack would be made before night, but for some reason the rebels have kept their distance.

A train of cars came down this afternoon. It was filled with people escaping from Carlisle. Among the collection was a large number of contrabands. Throughout the entire day wagons of all descriptions, loaded with furniture and other property, have been coming into town. It is enough to touch the most obdurate heart to see the poor blacks as they come to this common asylum. Several of them walked the entire distance from Carlisle, and the feet of many were swollen and bleeding.

The Mayor has issued an order calling upon the people to stand firm in this crisis, and prohibiting the sale of all liquors until further notice. A regiment of infantry and another of cavalry passed to the opposite side of the Susquehanna this afternoon. The rebels are advancing slowly from their position, and if they do not appear in too heavy numbers, Gen. KNIPE will certainly resist them at Carlisle. At McConnellsville the militia ran precipitately. It is hoped they will do better hereafter.

This evening the police force from Philadelphia were presented with a beautiful flag by Mr. JOHN D. WATSON, on behalf of their comrades at home.

HARRISBURGH, Thursday, June 25—Midnight.

The rebels continue to advance on Carlisle. The citizens have turned out in large numbers to dig rifle pits and to throw up intrenchments.

Whether or not the Union forces will meet the enemy west of the Harrisburgh fortifications, depends on the strength of his force. It is the impression to-night that Gen. KNIPE will fall back to here, although the matter is left entirely at his discretion.

To-morrow will reveal important events.

WHIT.

HARRISBURGH, Penn., Thursday, June 25—2½ P.M.

During the whole of last night, and up to the present time, long trains of wagons laden with goods and household furniture have entered the city. The farmers are flocking in with their horses; also any number of contrabands of all ages and sexes.

There are about 600 contrabands between here and Carlisle on the way.

The Jews and many others are packing up their goods, ready for shipment.

The matter of declaring martial law is under consideration, to prevent all the able-bodied men from leaving the city. This is considered as the only mode of compelling hundreds of persons, whose only desire is to make money out of the misfortunes of their fellow-creatures, to remain and defend the city.

The rebel column was slowly advancing this morning on Carlisle.

HARRISBURGH, Thursday, June 25.

The latest advices from Carlisle state that the Telegraph Company's operator left there this morning, but the military operator is still there maintaining communication. The rebels are within four miles in force. Their encampment is in view of the city. Our troops were drawn up in line of battle nearly all day, expecting an attack. Gen. KNIPE is said to be throwing up intrenchments there.

Gen. COUCH, to-day, issued an order appointing Col. CORWIN, formerly Professor of Gerard College, to collect from official dispatches all the information that is not contraband. He is to make up two dispatches each day for the use of the reporters. Col. CORWIN has not attended to his duties, and consequently there is not a word of official news by telegraph from this Department. There is a important news which ought to be sent, but it cannot be got at.

TELEGRAMS FROM CARLISLE.

CARLISLE, Pa., Thursday, June 25—10 P. M.

We do not expect the enemy here to-night.

Gen. EWELL's headquarters are at Shippensburgh.

Gen. KNIPE is obeying instructions, and making the best disposition of his forces that can be made under the circumstances.

The enemy's force is very strong.

Gen. EWELL, when at Chambersburgh, issued a printed proclamation to the citizens not to sell liquor to his soldiers under certain penalties. We have a copy of the proclamatory order, dated on the 22d inst.

The enemy is feeling along very cautiously. His cavalry may annoy us here before morning, but this is doubtful.

TELEGRAMS FROM PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 25.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company have received a dispatch, dated Carlisle, 11 o'clock this morning, which says:

"The rebels commenced moving at 10 o'clock this morning, and their advance was then eight miles off."

Business is partially suspended in this city to-day.

The receipts and shipments of goods by the Pennsylvania Railroad is temporarily suspended.

A dispatch from Harrisburgh says:

"Gen. JENKINS is at McConnellsburgh, Fulton County.

The rebels have ten regiments, with artillery and cavalry, on South Mountain, beyond Gettysburgh."

TELEGRAMS FROM McCONNELLSBURGH.

McCONNELL'S HOTEL, FOURTEEN MILES WEST OF McCONNELLSBURGH, Thursday, June 25.

The rebels in force entered McConnellsburgh last night, at 8 o'clock. The telegraph operator, after a perilous journey through the mountains, reached this place, and established an office.

The rebel advance was met by the Twelfth Pennsylvania cavalry, and a brisk skirmish ensued. The Twelfth was finally compelled to retreat before the superior numbers, with a loss of three wounded. A regiment of militia, under Col. ZUIK, fell back at the advance of the enemy; but an independent company, under Capt. WALLACE, took its position in the mountains, bushwhacking the rebels with great success, numbers of rebels are known to have been killed, but the extent of the loss is unknown. Fears are entertained for the safety of Capt. WALLACE and his company. As he has not made his appearance, it is believed he has retreated to the other side of the mountain.

The rebels had wagon trains, and from all appearances they intend that their occupation of the Valley shall be permanent.

TELEGRAMS FROM BLOODY RUN, PA.

BLOODY RUN, Wednesday, June 24.

JENKINS's whole rebel force is concentrated at Hancock.

McConnellsburgh was occupied by rebel cavalry this evening.

THE TWENTY-FIRST NEW-YORK.

OUR HARRISBURGH CORRESPONDENCE.

The Strength of the Rebels—Spirit of the People—A Patriotic Sight—The Veterans of 1812 in the Field—Particulars of Milroy's Retreat.

HARRISBURGH, Wednesday, June 24, 1863.

The story that I was so much inclined to disbelieve on Sunday, seems to be generally credited now, and the fact of the existence of thirty or forty thousand rebels between Williamsport and Hagerstown is placed beyond much doubt. Scouts from two directions report that number. The report from Gettysburgh says forty, and that from Chambersburgh forty thousand. These scouts are, as I am informed, not mere farmers, but experienced men, who have been long employed in seeking out and estimating the forces of the enemy. Their information also coincides on the other point, stated by telegraph, that the enemy are advancing up the valley. They have entered Chambersburgh and burned the bridge at Scotland, which had just been rebuilt by us. Up to this afternoon we are still in telegraphic communication with Shippensburgh. The troops at Chambersburgh retired. It was clear that they could make no effective resistance, and would probably have been captured. My opinion is that when Gen. COUCH sent them there he intended to hold the place, and if they were attacked send forward supports and commence immediately the general advance toward the Potomac. But recent developments show, as I have stated, that there is a much larger rebel force in the valley than was at first supposed. I almost begin to believe that the rebels intend making Harrisburgh or Pittsburgh the base of operations and supplies. There is no use in discussing the impossibility of their accomplishing anything in this way. It is too obvious. But they may do us, at least, a great deal of harm. Gen. JENKINS told a lady in Chambersburgh that they intended to come to Harrisburgh and stay. This may have been a mere piece of braggadocio, and he was likely enough to say it, whether it was true or not; but one thing is certain—if they did originally intend to come, they would have been much more sure of their object by moving faster. Still this delay is not conclusive against the supposition that they intend to occupy Harrisburgh. It required time for them to collect their troops, and get horses to mount them on. It would not do to send a small body of men so far into the interior without their being well supported. It is asserted, with what truth I do not know, that the rebel connections extend unbroken down to Front Royal, and that all the sick and wounded and all prisoners are sent there. This is, indeed, an extended line, but I suppose their safety compels them to keep it up. It is useless, however, to speculate on events which, in a few days, must take some definite shape.

THE SPIRIT OF THE PEOPLE.

I hardly like to say it, and still less do I like to believe it, but it is an incontestible fact, that the spirit of the people is not what it should be. They do not come up to the crisis. Various reasons are assigned for this, but it seems to me that they are all superficial. I have already explained how much trouble and confusion has arisen from the inaccurate and diverse character of the orders under which the troops were enlisted. It may also be true that the people do not share the anxiety and alarm of Gov. CURTIN, believing him to be impulsive and credulous. But these are minor matters. At the bottom there must be a want of heart in the cause. Excuses are plenty to those who are willing to hunt for them. But if a man is imbued with the true fire of patriotism, he wants no excuse. There are men enough here who are willing to go into the trenches and shoot their muskets off to save their property, but few who are willing to volunteer for the defence of their country. I met a man this forenoon, and he said to a gentleman who was walking with me, one of the leading citizens of the State: "We have a full company of one hundred and ten men, and we are waiting to go over into the trenches, but we don't want to be mustered in. One whole company that was enlisted here some months ago, disbanded when they found they must be mustered in. They were mostly young men, and perfectly free to go for six months. The traders who ran off at first have returned, and are taking advantage of the crowded state of the city to charge three prices for everything they sell. Some have even charged the men for water wherewith to fill their canteens; It is said that sixty men have enlisted from this neighborhood, where there are twenty-five thousand people.

It is true that Pennsylvania has given as many men as any State to the cause of the Union, but has the patriotism all died out?

A STIRRING SIGHT.

I had written thus far, when I heard the noise of a drum and fife, and looking out of my window, saw a band of fifteen or twenty old men marching up the street behind an old and tattered silk flag. I went out, and followed them. They were all soldiers of the war of 1812. The flag they bore was in the battle of Trenton, in 1774. They were members of the Soldiers' Association of 1812, of Harrisburgh, and went in a body to tender their services to the Governor. It was an inspiring sight. They were mostly hale, hearty old men, a little feeble and tottering in their walk, but far from having lost their energy or their patriotism. They kept perfect step to the music, and marched up to the Governor's room, where the Captain, in a few appropriate words, announced that they were ready to go into the trenches and fight, and would go further if required. Not one of these men is less than 66 years of age, and the oldest is 76. There is an example for young man who are so afraid of their precious bones. These veterans were loudly cheered. No one needed to ask who they were. The story was written in the tattered ensign and the gray heads. It was curious to see them manoeuvre. They marched in single file out of the Governor's room. When they got on the ground the order was given, "Left face" —not front, as now. The next order was: "By sections of two, on your left, wheel." Turning a corner it was right or left wheel, not file. The old boys came up to the mark like young ones, and carried us back to the old times. As they halted in front of their rendezvous, a number of soldiers gathered around, and one of them said, with manly indignation: "Pretty hard on you, old cocks." (irreverent, but forcible) "to have to come out. This —— neighborhood has sent sixty men, and here are sixteen old ones." These old patriots are to be armed with the old flint-lock muskets, and if they have to go into the trenches, they will "do or die," you may be sure. It may be interesting to state, that thirteen are Republicans and three Democrats.

MILROY'S RETREAT.

I had an interesting conversation with a cavalry captain of MILROY's command. He more than confirmed my impressions of that disaster. He says that the reason of the retreat was that they had but three hours' ammunition left for the large guns, but he blames MILROY for not having taken measures to ascertain more fully the whereabouts and the force of the enemy. He says they were constantly surprised. The retreat, when decided upon, was so hasty that everything was left behind—officers' baggage, provisions, wagons, artillery and everything of value—nothing was saved. After the fight at Martinsburgh, which was quite severe, the command was left to shift for itself, and each regiment took its own means of escaping. My informant with eleven men escaped, the rebels being always a few miles behind him to Bedford, where he was ordered with 50 men to Baltimore. On the way hither they were also constantly meeting the enemy. They arrived at Chambersburgh, after a march of 40 miles, on the evening that Col. KNIPE was evacuating the place. The cars were full and they had to ride to Shippensburgh on their horses. They had been eleven days and several nights in the saddle, and their horses were nearly broken down. They left here to-day for Baltimore.

MISHNEN.

A NEW EXCITEMENT

will probably take place to-morrow. The telegraph will inform you to-night of the movements of the rebels. They marched up the two turnpikes that run each side of the railroad at Shippensburgh, and virtually surrounded the town. The telegraph operator left in becoming haste, and stopped at Newville to communicate the news. He is still at Newville, which is but a short distance this side of Shippensburgh, and only eight miles from Carlisle. Our cavalry, under Capt. BOYD, are watching the enemy, and scouts give us notice of every movement.

The force of the rebels is not stated, but it is probably large. A deserter from EWELL's corps, who deserted at Hagerstown yesterday, said to-day that the whole corps had left Hagerstown 20,000 strong. He is an Irishman, was pressed into the war, and is glad, he says, to get North. The stories of deserters are always to be received with many grains of allowance, but this man is apparently more reliable than the most of them.

Carlisle, it must be remembered, is only twenty-six miles from Harrisburgh, and Graysonville, which the telegraph says the rebels have also approached, is eight miles nearer. So you see we are getting at close quarters. I do not think there will be any serious fighting until the rebels approach the fortifications on the other side of the river. Those cannot be easily taken, and at no other place for miles above can they cross the Susquehanna. The great fight must be made here if anywhere.

Meanwhile the apathy continues. The people are not awake. I have no doubt that thousands will flock here when the town is really invested, but at present everybody is calm. Is it incredulity, or cowardice, or are they all Copperheads? I know it is not the latter reason, but I think it is the first. They have been so often scared for nothing that they do not believe when the real wolf comes. To-morrow, however, I think they will be waked up.

OUR CUMBERLAND CORRESPONDENCE.

One Hundred Miles of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Given Up to the Tender Mercies of the Rebels—Cumberland, Md., Captured—Union Forces Decamp—Recruits for Secesh—Capture of Horses, Military Stores—Painful Excitement—Grand Fright.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Monday, June 22, 1863.

So far as all the rest of the world goes we are here at this point as yet in a fog, and I will therefore only speak of things hereabouts. On last Monday the excitement commenced by news of a raid on the road below, and orders were received for all the troops along the line of the road to concentrate at Grafton. This order was subsequently changed to New-Creek, twenty miles distant. Hence during Monday and Monday night and Tuesday troops were hurried through, and from here westward, together with most of the military stores—all taken to New-Creek—on mere rumored reports of the approach of a rebel force. Hundreds of citizens hurriedly left, and thus this important point, with its ten thousand inhabitants, was left entirely unprotected, and the most intense and painful excitement prevailed. On Tuesday afternoon reports increased that the rebels were approaching, and sure enough on Wednesday morning (the 17th) early the shrill report of a brass field-piece caused all eyes to be directed to a hill southeast of the town, where was displayed, in battle array, a force of cavalry. A flag of truce was sent in by them, demanding the surrender of the place, with a pledge that private property should be respected. There was no alternative but to comply with the request, and accordingly some 250 or 300 cavalry took possession of the place, freely examining into everything, but behaving themselves with propriety, and buying and paying for what they wanted in the stores. They were, however, evidently ill at ease, and left in a few hours, without doing any other damage than picking up a few odds and ends of commissary stores, a few horses, and a few recruits from among us. They also visited the jail, and liberated a prisoner, whom they claimed. They were a part of JENKINS's guerrillas, and could have been driven away by fifty determined and well-armed men, and it is lamentable to have to say that on their approach, several hundred of MINNOR's cavalry, who had been here since the previous day, and who could have driven off the rebels, decamped toward New-Creek, and that, too, under the leadership of Gen. KELLY, who happened to be here Tuesday night, en route to New-Creek. Thus, during all of Wednesday, Wednesday night, Thursday and Thursday night and Friday, this town was paralyzed with fear, every moment expecting the return of the rebels in greater force, for purposes of plunder.

On Thursday night a company of Union cavalry was sent here from New-Creek, to reconnoitre, but only remained a few hours, and it was not until Friday evening that any permanent and effective relief arrived, consisting of two regiments of infantry, a section of artillery and some cavalry, and the people once more breathed freely. It was a wonderful escape—a kind Providence evidently overruling the blunders of both sides to our good.

As to other matters in this region now transpiring, or yet to happen, reports are so various and conflicting that it is impossible even to guess at the truth. We fear the worst, and hope for the best. I will only add that it is most deplorable that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad should thus again be permitted to be given up to the vandals. The Company can and will, undoubtedly, with their usual energy, open the road again for through business in a few weeks, but it will be at a tremendous sacrifice; and they had a right—the country had a right—to expect more efficient protection, and that the soil of Maryland and Pennsylvania should not thus again have been allowed to be invaded. The road is all right now, from here westward to Wheeling, and trains are again running.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Pennsylvania Reserves Under Command of Gen. Hooker.

Gen. French Assigned to the Command of Harper's Ferry.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25.

The Pennsylvania Reserves, under Maj.-Gen. CRESSWELL, have been transferred from the Department of Washington to the Army of the Potomac. Their number has been increased by the return to service of many who were disabled or wounded in the many battles through which they have passed. Applications have been made by the officers, and desires expressed by the men, to be led against the enemy now invading their native State. The prospect of active service has inspired much enthusiasm among the reserves.

Of the 513 rebel prisoners to be sent South for exchange, 51 are severely wounded. Most of them were captured within the past week.

It is understood that Gen. FRENCH has been assigned to the command of Harper's Ferry.

A reconnoissance went yesterday within several miles of Culpepper, but found only a few rebel scouts.

A large number of sick and wounded were this afternoon transferred to the hospitals in this vicinity from the Virginia side.

GEN. PLEASANTON'S COMMAND.

An Attack by the Rebels—Location of Hill's and Ewell's Corps—An Incident—Skirmishing Near Aldie—A Bold Attempt to Capture a Train—List of Casualties.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MIDDLEBURGH, Va., Tuesday, June 23, 1863.

The enemy finding that Gen. PLEASANTON was moving back, ventured to come out of the Gap (Ashby's) and make an attack upon our rear, to-day. A portion of the column was halted and the advance of the enemy was checked. Their attack did not create any alarm, nor were many lives lost. A. P. HILL's corps is known to be in the Gaps, and EWELL's just beyond in the Shenandoah Valley. Writing of EWELL's command reminds me of an event that transpired one week ago last Saturday night. WEIDRICH's brigade—now commanded by Col. TAYLOR—was ordered to Warrenton; among these, the First New-Jersey cavalry, Major BEAUMONT, was ordered to proceed to Waterloo, and just as far as possible toward Amissville. At Carter's Creek we found the bridge destroyed, but through the agency of a reliable contraband, a crossing was effected at 1 o'clock A. M. A squadron was then detached to cross Hedgeman's River, and feel its way toward Amissville. At the fording place the picket fired several shots, but no notice was taken of it, and the squadron pushed on. When near Amissville, a rebel soldier ran up and innocently inquired to what Division the party belonged. Major BEAUMONT responded by asking where headquarters were at Amissville, and was told that "Lieut.-Gen. EWELL is at Amissville, and his troops are all about here in the woods." True enough, we were in the heart of the enemy's camp. It is hardly necessary to say that the squadron got across Hedgeman's River just about as quick as circumstances would permit.

There was some skirmishing near Aldie to-day. Gen. BUFORD moved up the Snicker's Gap road as far as where the enemy had destroyed the bridge across Goose Creek, the Second Brigade, Col. DAVIS, in advance. As soon a picket was fired upon, when Capt. HAZLET, of the Ninth New-York, crossed the creek with a squadron, and after a brief skirmish drove the enemy away. Capt. HAZLET lost three men, taken prisoners. In a charge made, Lieut. BENJAMIN, of the Ninth New-York cavalry, shot Maj. RUSS, of the rebel lancers, through the head, and another officer, a lieutenant, was mortally wounded, and several prisoners were taken. Subsequently the enemy attempted to cut off a train going from Aldie to the front, under charge of Lieut. SAUNDERS, Ninth New-York cavalry. Their design was frustrated, and the train saved. A dash was made for a forage train seven miles east of Aldie this morning. There were 50 teams. The rebels made no attempt to take away the wagons, but cut the horses loose and stirred off. Lieut. WEBSTER, of the Sixth New-York cavalry, was in charge, and at the time was at the head of the train. The attack was made upon the rear. Lieut. WEBSTER immediately put spurs to his horse, and made for the nearest body of cavalry, and started in pursuit of the enemy. He succeeded in recapturing all the animals except four. Sergt. WOODWORTH, Ninth New-York cavalry, who was at the rear of the train, is missing, and it is supposed was captured. The writer of this was with him but minutes before the attack.

The officers and men of the First Rhode Island regiment are daily coming in. A camp has been formed at Alexandria, where the regiment will again be prepared for the field. The officers relate many interesting incidents of their experience while cutting their way through the enemy's lines. Lieut. CHENEY was shot from his horse, and fell in the road. The rebel officer in charge of the pursuing force, to his credit be it said, told his men to go to the right, as there was a wounded officer in the road, and he was compelled to use his sword to enforce the order. Lieut. CHENEY has not been seen since. Capt. A. B. BURR and Lieut. SAWYER were nearly captured at the time. An officer came up to Capt. BURR and said, "It is no use, you had better surrender; you will all be captured." Capt. BURR replied that he could not see it. Both had pistols drawn, but neither seemed disposed to fire, and Capt. BURR dashed off. He was subsequently wounded twice, in the thigh and right side, while being closely pursued. Lieut. SAWYER's horse kicked up, and both feet came down inside of Capt. BURR's reins. BURR told SAWYER to cut the reins. The latter felt in his pockets, but could find no knife. B. then searched his own pockets, but he had no knife. Just at this moment B. heard a man say, "Here are two officers—surrender, you Yankee ——— ———" at the same moment firing. One ball struck Lieut. SAWYER's horse in the neck, and the animal dashed off, clearing himself very readily from the bridle rein without the use of a knife. Both officers escaped capture. BURR has been wounded four times before.

The following is a list of wounded in the cavalry fight between Gen. PLEASANTON and STUART, on Sunday, June 20, between Middleburgh and Ashby's Gap, as furnished by Dr. F. V. DAYTON, Surgeon in charge:

MOVEMENTS OF GEN. HOOKER.

From the Baltimore American, June 25.

Gen. LEE, with the main body of his army, is understood to be on the western slope of the Bull Run Mountains, moving cautiously forward, but we have no intelligence as to the movements of Gen. HOOKER, though it is believed that he will soon have a large force in Loudoun County, arrayed between the enemy and Washington and Baltimore. The portion of the army which left Fairfax with Gen. MCCLELLAN last year, under Gen. MCCLELLAN, remained command and advanced on Leesburg and Aldie, with the exception that our army, instead of being compelled to fall back to Washington, have occupied the whole Virginia shore up to Harper's Ferry, and City Stress at the point where that last named Maryland by that name. The portion of Maryland Heights, formerly occupied, now forms the right wing of Gen. HOOKER's army, and we learn has been placed under his command—being virtually a strongly posted reinforcement to his army.

THE REBEL RAM ATLANTA.

Particulars of Her Surrender.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VESSEL.

Extract of a Letter from an Officer of Admiral Dupont's Squadron to the Editor of the National Intelligencer.

FORT ROYAL, Friday, June 19, 1863.

The capture in Warsaw Sound of the Confederate ironclad Atlanta, after Fleet by Capt. Rodgers, of the Weehawken, is a splendid affair, and the most important naval capture of the war. She is the finest and most powerful vessel the Confederates have ever had, and far more formidable than was the Merrimac; and the result of the action has proved the advantage and terrible efficacy of the 15-inch guns, and fully sustains the Department in the introduction of these guns, notwithstanding the great opposition to them.

The Atlanta came down with the most confident expectation of promptly capturing our iron-clads—the Weehawken, Capt. Rodgers, and the Nahant, Capt. Downs. She was first discovered soon after in the gray of the morning, when the Weehawken slipped her cable and stood down the sound, but soon turned about her ponderous opponent, closely followed by the Nahant. The Atlanta fired them off her heavy rifled guns before the Weehawken opened upon her with her 15-inch gun, throwing a solid shot of four hundred and forty pounds; that first shot virtually decided the action, for the terrible missile came through her thick iron plating, backed by twenty-five inches of solid timber, as if it were nothing, the greatest part of her crew, some 40 opinions, but the most part by the concussion, without being personally touched. One of her lieutenants told me he was struck down by it, and, though untouched, he could not get up for ten minutes. The next shot struck one of the iron port-stoppers, knocking it into fragments, and wounding seven men. The third shot entered the top of the pilot-house, wounding two of the pilots, and disabling the helm of the wheel, prostrating the whole form on the floor of the pilot-house. The fourth shot struck her on the knuckle, that is where the iron casemate joins at a sharp angle the iron plating of the side, and the fifth shot went through her smoke-stack. Every shot struck her, the precision of fire being admirable. The first gunners pointed by Capt. Rodgers himself. The fifth gun she bounted down her flag, and was up a white one. The whole thing, from the firing of the first gun, was over in fifteen minutes, and never were men so utterly confounded and surprised at a result as were her officers. So confident were they of success that two steamers came down to tow the prizes back to Savannah, and they were filled with ladies to witness the fight and certain victory.

The Atlanta has cost the rebel Government a million of dollars—of our money, not Confederate paper—and is filled with valuable stores. Their plan was, after smashing the Weehawken and Nahant, to join the iron-clads in Charleston harbor and raise the blockade of all the Southern ports, for they consider her as a sea-going cruiser. What infinite mischief has been saved by her capture, to say nothing of its great moral effect, by demonstrating the immense effectiveness of our Monitors and cowing the rebels in their future movements with their iron-roofed Merrimacs!

Capt. Downs, in the Nahant, was gallantly endeavoring to come alongside the Atlanta so as to give her an effective fire at very close quarters, believing, from the advices they had of her, that his shot would not penetrate at a distance which was greater than that of the Weehawken, but the fight was so promptly settled that he had not the opportunity of firing a single shot, and the Weehawken only five.

The machinery of the Atlanta is unscathed, and she will be at once added to this squadron, for her rebel injuries do not interfere with her active service.

This vessel has been a perfect thorn in the flesh, she has required constant watching, and might at any time have taken advantage of the absence of the iron-clads on other service to come here and destroy all our wooden vessels, not only gunships and dumpsters, but also our wooden vessels of war; and great credit is due to her captors, for they handled their vessel with consummate skill, and the results is a cause of great and general congratulation throughout the squadron.

The Port Royal correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer furnishes that paper with a detailed account of the circumstances of the recent capture of the famous iron-clad ram Atlanta. It appears from this narrative that the vessel is identical with the Georgia, by which name she was also known. After detailing the projects and plans of the officers, and the engagement itself, which has been fully described in the official reports already published, the letter in question says:

This last shot of the Weehawken caused all visitors of the blockade, Chevalier and Italian consuls, to rapidly fade from the mental vision of the Atlanta's officers, and immediately the vessel was turned about from the wreck of her antagonist, and in the space of only of fifteen minutes she was once more fell a prize to the Weehawken's persons (thirty-six minutes from the time she appeared in sight), and as the white flag fluttered from her deck, the Savannah ladies were seen rapidly going up Wilmington River to bear to the people of Savannah not the glorious news of victory, but the sad tidings of defeat.

DETAILS OF THE SURRENDER.

Upon seeing the white flag our men cheered most lustily, and Capt. ROGERS immediately dispatched Capt. HAYNORT, of the Weehawken, in a small boat to the Atlanta to receive her commander's sword and take possession of her in the name of the navy of the United States. As soon as Capt. HAYNORT arrived on board he received the sword of Capt. WEBB, hauled down the new Confederate flag which was flying at her stern, and ran up our own victorious ensign. He then went forward and was ordering his men to cast anchor, when Capt. WEBB exclaimed, "For God's sake, Captain, don't cast off those anchors, we have a torpedo underneath this bow." Capt. HAYNORT turned to him with the utmost nonchalance and said, "I don't care anything about your torpedoes; I can stand them if you can, and if you don't wish to be blown up with me, you had better tell me how to raise the torpedo."

To this Capt. WEBB readily assented, and, calling some of his men, pulleys were attached to a large iron rod which ran out from the prow, and soon there appeared coming out of the water a huge torpedo attached to the end of this rod, which projected thirty feet beyond the bow. Capt. HAYNORT ordered his men to carefully remove the cap from the torpedo and then fill it with water, in order that the powder might be destroyed. This was done, and the torpedo, holding fifty pounds of power, was raised aloft on this rod, and was secured at an angle of about forty-five degrees from the deck.

THE OFFICERS OF THE ATLANTA.

A remarkable circumstance in this affair is the fact that Capt. WILLIAM WEBB, formerly a Lieutenant in our navy and commanding the Atlanta, is an old classmate of Capt. JOHN ROGERS, who commands the Weehawken. Capt. HAYNORT also found that the other officers were old and intimate acquaintances of his before the rebellion occurred. I have no doubt but that these discoveries lent an additional zest to the victory.

SPEECH OF CAPT. WEBB.

Capt. WEBB, after surrendering his vessel, summoned the crew on deck, and addressed them as follows: "I have surrendered our vessel because circumstances over which I have no control have compelled me to do so. I know that you started upon this expedition with high hopes, and you have been disappointed. I most earnestly wish that it had happened otherwise, but Providence, for some good reason, has interposed with our fondest hopes and ideas of success. You all know that if we had not run aground the result would have been different, and now that a regard for your lives has influenced me to the surrender, I would advise you to submit quietly to the fate which has overtaken us. I hope that we all may soon be returned to our homes, and meet again in a common brotherhood."

At the conclusion of this speech, Capt. WEBB became so affected that he fainted. What a contrast this speech presents to the one which the same man had delivered upon that same deck, to the same crew, but an hour previous, when he promised them, in a grandiloquent oration, that "Before breakfast we will have in tow the Yankee Monitors."

THE CREW OF THE ATLANTA.

One cannot imagine a more villainous-looking set of men than this same Atlanta crew. They are all Georgia "crackers," the poorest "white trash" of Georgia, without education, or anything, in fact, which would entitle them to be called men except that they have the human form. Not one man among them is a sailor, but they are all soldiers. The officers, being perfect gentlemen, compared strangely with the gang of cut-throats. The men, however, were grievously disappointed, and loudly declaimed against their ill luck.

REMOVAL OF THE OFFICERS AND CREW.

Fourteen officers and fifty men, including those wounded, were transferred to the steamer Island City, and the remainder of the officers and crew were placed on board of the Oleander. They were all brought up to this place yesterday morning, and again transferred to the United States steamship Vermont, and the wounded properly cared for. This afternoon they were all put aboard the United States gunboat James Adger, which will carry them to New-York. The entire crew—officers and men—number 160, and a more dejected-looking set of naval heroes never trod the deck of our gunboat before.

WHAT WAS FOUND ON BOARD.

Upon examining our prize, Capt. ROGERS found that she had an immense stock of provisions and stores. These, at the least calculation, were amply sufficient for a two months' cruise, and of the best quality. The clothing found on her was of a superior make and texture, and pronounced to be by the crew well clothed. The ammunition, provisions, and oil cases, of which there were 50 in the hold, proved very acceptable to our sailors. The officers' quarters were fitted up very luxuriously, and revealed a well selected stock of liquors, cigars, wines, &c. Everything, in fact, in the vessel, indicated not only that she was a part of the whole, but that her unfortunate voyagers had started upon it in long season.

THE ARMAMENT OF THE ATLANTA.

The Atlanta is armed with six guns, one 7-inch pivot gun, [illegible] and eight [illegible] broadside, [illegible] which, you will [illegible] a good exposition against [illegible] the late attack on Charleston. They are [illegible] rifles, and throw that long steel-pointed missile of English manufacture. The Atlanta has [illegible] one fore and one aft pivot protected, and upon opening one of them five hundred rounds of ammunition were found in it. The other magazine is supposed to contain the same amount, and indeed, her officers say that she has on board twenty-thousand rounds. When you consider that one hundred rounds is a ship's regular armament, you cannot but conclude that the Atlanta's cruise intended some damage. She had also, in addition, a plentiful supply of torpedoes, cutlasses, boarding pikes, guns, revolvers, &c. Her armament is truly gigantic.

DESCRIPTION OF THE INTERIOR.

She has, inside, three decks; first, the gun-deck, 200 feet long by 40 wide; immediately below this is a deck 200 feet long, which is subdivided into the Captain's cabin aft, ward-room, the petty officers' quarters, and forward, the men's quarters. Below this deck is the third, the orlop-deck, in which are stored all the stores, provisions, &c. Immediately fore-and-aft of this deck are the magazines. The engines and their necessary appurtenances, of course occupy the centre of the vessel. These engines are the same which were in her when she ran the blockade as the old Fingal. They were built on the Clyde, and are models for their beauty and action.

THE ARMOR OF THE ATLANTA.

First and last the outside were wrought-iron bars, six inches wide by two inches thick, running perpendicularly with her side, and properly secured, both above and below, by rivets and bolts. Across these were, horizontally, and on the inside, ran bars of like material and pattern, fastened to the outside layer by the strongest rivets. Within this layer, and fastened to it, were two thicknesses of five oak two-inch plank, also running perpendicularly and horizontally, and again within these were two more similar thicknesses of Georgia pine plank, forming the last series of her armor. You will thus see that her armor is secured immense thickness, and presenting all the solidity which could be given it by four inches of wrought-iron, four inches of live oak, and four inches of Georgia pine.

THE PORT-HOLES AND SHUTTERS.

Her port-holes, however, were made especially strong. Entire layers of iron and plank, so that the embrasure measures, from the inside to the outside, forty inches. These port-holes were a foot and a half long by one foot in width, and were protected by wrought iron shutters, formed by two traverse layers of iron bars, of the same dimensions as those which composed her armor. These shutters hung upon a pivot, firmly adjusted over the port-hole, and were raised or lowered by a small chain which, being attached to the side of each shutter, ran through a small aperture into the gun-deck.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE PILOT-HOUSE.

Forward of the smoke-stack was an elevation on the top deck, to all appearances like an a cone; upon this cone was a small square look-out, just large enough on the inside to allow a man's head to turn with freedom. On each side of this look-out were two small apertures, in the shape of parallelograms, slanting toward the interior, and presenting to the pilot's optics in the look-out two look-outs, an inch and a half long by an inch wide. This look-out was of wrought iron four inches thick, and the cone upon which it stood was the same thickness, with this additional strength, however, that the interior of the cone, which was square, the interstices between the sides of the upper part of the pilot-house and the concave surface of the cone were filled with eight-inch, square, live-oak blocks. From the top of the cone to the base of the cone was but two feet and a half, so that the pilot exposed only about one-third of his person, the rest of the pilot-house being within the body of the ship and reached by a stepladder from the gun-deck. The second shot from the Weehawken, although it was a glancing one, wrenched off this lookout and smashed in the cone. From this pilot-house were seven speaking-tubes communicating with their appropriate rooms below, and all properly lettered and numbered, so that the man at the wheel can readily communicate with those below.

OUTWARD DIMENSIONS OF THE ATLANTA.

Her length from bow to stern-post is a small fraction over three hundred feet. The gun-deck covering is, at its base, two hundred feet long and forty feet in width, and at its top one hundred feet in length by forty-one feet in breadth. You will thus see that her roof does not slope all the way up, but has a very respectable top deck. From the gun-deck to the roof the perpendicular height is six feet, and the sides of the roof slopes at an angle of forty-five degrees, the standing height is eight feet. The lower edge of the roof is twenty inches above water mark. From the stanchions above the water about eight feet. From the gun-deck to her bow, for another space of eight feet, the side is also fifty feet to her bow. The distance from her gun-deck to her keel, in amidships, is about twenty feet. Her motive apparatus is about four feet in diameter, and her screw is about four feet in diameter, which, when in motion, propels the vessel at the rate of two miles an hour. The rudder is very large, and is operated by a chain, which, in the event of its being disabled, can be worked by a tackle. The vessel is very easy in the water, and, in fact, is a good sea-boat, as she proved in coming from Savannah to Port Royal. As a fighting machine, as far as we can judge, she is a good one. As to her speed, we can only form a conjecture from what we know of her. She was built for speed, and, if she is not sick, she should be jumper with dynamite! It is all a mere matter of forecirculation. Those who are predisposed to it will escape by no medicine and no diet, and those who are not will go on with impunity under almost all degrees of imprudence. At any rate, so it seems on board of this good steamer City of Baltimore—not one of the fastest—yet one of the best officered and manned that any man need desire.

The table has given satisfaction to all the passengers. I am not able to speak from much observation, being present but on two days, and then in a veiled and modest way, as one brooding on secret troubles. If we reach Liverpool Wednesday night, and we are now abreast of Cape Clear on Tuesday night, we shall have made the trip in eleven days. To all who have prejudices against propellers or screw steamers, I have only to say that the fashion is changing, and old travelers are giving them the preference to side-wheel steamers. The new ones now on the ocean are as rapid as any afloat, and their motion just as easy—for between a roll and a pitch there is no sort of choice if one is sick, and none if one is well.

Already the memory of disgustful days is floating away, and the shores of Ireland, that are bathed in the western sun, and glowing in many lovely hues, charm away the lassitude of tedious days. Spots of green along the cliffs, and on the slopes, suggest flocks and their keepers. Are the people looking out at us, and wondering what we are thinking of? We are thinking how supremely blessed are those who dwell at home, tossed by no waves, given by no winds, pent up in no narrow bounds, but with God's great heaven over them, and a solid earth from which to look up at it! That's what one is thinking of, at any rate. The sea is very calm as we draw toward the shore, yet the swell breaks along the line of the cliffs, and rumbles them with white. Around the base of Fastenet rock, the spray dashes high, nor makes haste, but falls again with a kind of masterful deliberation, as if it were duty and not levity that had inspired the act. The air is all balm. Everything on board is happy and busy in making others happy. Every half hour changes the scene. Now bays sink into the coast-line, here and there an old tower stands bleak against the sky, and in sheltered spots dwellings faintly shine out from afar, with vague and nameless associations of home and domestic peace. We speed along. The bell has just struck seven, yet the sun seems an hour high, and pours a full flood against upon the water and the land, and our voyage is ending like a pleasure trip in an inland lake. I shall try and drop you a line from Liverpool. H. W. B.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

MAY MISSING.—Mr. JOHN SCOFIELD, dyer and fast carrier, of the City of Newark, N. J., has been missing since the 26th of April last. His family are in the utmost grief in consequence. Any one knowing anything of him or his late will confer a great favor by acquainting his wife, at Mr. JAMES STORY's, corner of Myrtle and Nostrand-avenues, Brooklyn.

A VICIOUS BOY.—A day or two since a lad, 11 years of age, named JOHN LEWIS, whose parents reside in Hoboken, attempted to shoot his sister, then to set fire to the house, and finished up by jumping off the dock for the purpose of drowning himself. He was rescued and committed to the county jail for three months.

THETA DELTA CHI.—The Annual Convention of the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity commenced its session of the Astor House yesterday, the attendance being unusually large. Delegates were present from all the most flourishing colleges in the country.

SALE OF RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS AND ENGRAVINGS.—Yesterday afternoon, Messrs. BANGS, MERWIN & Co., at their rooms, Nos. 504 and 506 Broadway, sold at auction a collection of expensive and rare books and engravings, imported by the late Wm. C. HALL. The most noticeable among the collection were NAPOLEON'S great work on Egypt, with atlas and descriptive illustrations, which brought $241 50; a collection of 54 super-line engravings, from the celebrated series of paintings which were formerly in the gallery of the Louvre during the reign of NAPOLEON, sold for $172, and a collection of 101 fine engravings from the gallery of the Louvre, that sold for $172. The rest of the catalogue fetched ordinary prices.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

KINGS COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT CALENDAR—Friday, June 26.—Nos. 21, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 118, 119, 63, 77, 6.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER—SENTENCE OF MARY ANN MCLAUGHLIN—THE RATZKY CASE.—MARY ANN MCLAUGHLIN, who was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree, for killing her mother, was brought up for sentence yesterday morning. In answer to the question whether she had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon her, the prisoner said she was innocent of the crime charged against her, and accused her father, who was one of the witnesses in the case of perjury. In answer to the customary interrogations, the prisoner said she was 19 years old, born in Brooklyn, and a book-folder by occupation. Judge LOTT then sentenced the prisoner to confinement in the State Prison for four years. Judge BROWN took his seat on the Bench after the above case was disposed of, to hear the argument of counsel in the RATZKY case on the motion to suspend judgment. ISRAEL RADESKY was convicted, at the last term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, of murder in the first degree, for killing RICHMUND FELLNER. His counsel, Judge BROWN, moved for an arrest of judgment, pending an application for a new trial. The prisoner appeared in Court, and seems to have fully recovered from his illness. The case was argued by Judge BROWN for the prisoner, and by District Attorney SAMUEL D. MORRISON for the people. The points raised in support of the motion are as follows: 1. That the indictment was framed under the law of 1852, while the crime was committed in 1860, and the indictment being defective, owing to changes in the law between the periods named, a conviction, under the circumstances, would be void. 2. That the Court, as at present constituted, has no jurisdiction to pass sentence, not being the Oyer and Terminer at which the prisoner was convicted. 3. That the District-Attorney peremptorily challenged a juror without assigning any cause. The Court will probably render a decision on the motion to-day. If adverse, the prisoner will be sentenced.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS—THE FORTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.—The Forty-seventh regiment (National Guard) is now full equipped and under orders to leave this morning at 10 o'clock. They were mustered last evening at their armory, at the Odeon, Fifth-street, Eastern District, and numbered 320 men. This number could have been largely increased had there been uniforms provided, but when the first order for this regiment to leave was countermanded, many of the members gave their uniforms to the Thirteenth regiment. A special meeting of the Common Council was called on Wednesday morning to take measures for the equipment of the Forty-seventh, but a quorum of Aldermen did not attend, and the regiment had to rely on the State authorities and private effort. The regiment is under orders to report at Baltimore to Gen. SCHENCK.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Letter from Rev. H. W. Beecher.

The following letter from Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER will be read with interest by his many friends in our sister city, as well as by those who have not the personal interest in his welfare which his fellow-citizens so frequently evince. In his old style of contributor to the Independent, he is most welcome:

CITY OF BALTIMORE, OFF CAPE CLEAR, IRELAND, Tuesday, June 9, 1863.

My Dear Friends of the Office:

I do not wonder that Irishmen thrill to the name of Ireland, if their emotions bear any proportion to mine at the sight of her shores!

It is not the fine run of mountains which we described, with great joy, about noon to-day, nor the precipitous sides of storm-beaten cliffs, that are now glistening before me in the sun, nor Bantry Bay, nor the town of Baltimore that glints forth from a near recess, nor Cape Clear, that looms yet beyond, nor the light—Fastenet—that so enraptures me; but the more profound fact that I have escaped from the ocean, and am soon to get my feet again on shore!

I would not barter one square foot of land for the fee simple of the whole Atlantic Ocean. I had rather be NAPOLEON on Helena than NIMROD on this Ocean! Blessed be the land, and three blessed, and the lowest of all the sea! Amen.

And yet, why should a man be sea-sick? It is insolvable. The antidotes are hundreds, and the remedies thousands. They may be coupled in pairs and in threes, for they are of pocket-book consideration. Take much one, don't meddle with anything else." "Take a little more freely and use "Dr. GAY." "Nothing, [illegible] the remedy like a glass of champagne." [illegible] I have found in excellent article. Bear in mind, if a man is seasick, it is due to him if he needs with any of them; and if he is not sick, why should he tamper with remedies? It is all a mere matter of forecirculation. Those who are predisposed to it will escape by no medicine and no diet, and those who are not will go on with impunity under almost all degrees of imprudence. At any rate, so it seems on board of this good steamer City of Baltimore—not one of the fastest—yet one of the best officered and manned that any man need desire.

The table has given satisfaction to all the passengers. I am not able to speak from much observation, being present but on two days, and then in a veiled and modest way, as one brooding on secret troubles. If we reach Liverpool Wednesday night, and we are now abreast of Cape Clear on Tuesday night, we shall have made the trip in eleven days. To all who have prejudices against propellers or screw steamers, I have only to say that the fashion is changing, and old travelers are giving them the preference to side-wheel steamers. The new ones now on the ocean are as rapid as any afloat, and their motion just as easy—for between a roll and a pitch there is no sort of choice if one is sick, and none if one is well.

Already the memory of disgustful days is floating away, and the shores of Ireland, that are bathed in the western sun, and glowing in many lovely hues, charm away the lassitude of tedious days. Spots of green along the cliffs, and on the slopes, suggest flocks and their keepers. Are the people looking out at us, and wondering what we are thinking of? We are thinking how supremely blessed are those who dwell at home, tossed by no waves, given by no winds, pent up in no narrow bounds, but with God's great heaven over them, and a solid earth from which to look up at it! That's what one is thinking of, at any rate. The sea is very calm as we draw toward the shore, yet the swell breaks along the line of the cliffs, and rumbles them with white. Around the base of Fastenet rock, the spray dashes high, nor makes haste, but falls again with a kind of masterful deliberation, as if it were duty and not levity that had inspired the act. The air is all balm. Everything on board is happy and busy in making others happy. Every half hour changes the scene. Now bays sink into the coast-line, here and there an old tower stands bleak against the sky, and in sheltered spots dwellings faintly shine out from afar, with vague and nameless associations of home and domestic peace. We speed along. The bell has just struck seven, yet the sun seems an hour high, and pours a full flood against upon the water and the land, and our voyage is ending like a pleasure trip in an inland lake. I shall try and drop you a line from Liverpool. H. W. B.

KINGS COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT CALENDAR—Friday, June 26.—Nos. 21, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 118, 119, 63, 77, 6.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER—SENTENCE OF MARY ANN MCLAUGHLIN—THE RATZKY CASE.—MARY ANN MCLAUGHLIN, who was convicted of manslaughter in the second degree, for killing her mother, was brought up for sentence yesterday morning. In answer to the question whether she had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon her, the prisoner said she was innocent of the crime charged against her, and accused her father, who was one of the witnesses in the case of perjury. In answer to the customary interrogations, the prisoner said she was 19 years old, born in Brooklyn, and a book-folder by occupation. Judge LOTT then sentenced the prisoner to confinement in the State Prison for four years. Judge BROWN took his seat on the Bench after the above case was disposed of, to hear the argument of counsel in the RATZKY case on the motion to suspend judgment. ISRAEL RADESKY was convicted, at the last term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, of murder in the first degree, for killing RICHMUND FELLNER. His counsel, Judge BROWN, moved for an arrest of judgment, pending an application for a new trial. The prisoner appeared in Court, and seems to have fully recovered from his illness. The case was argued by Judge BROWN for the prisoner, and by District Attorney SAMUEL D. MORRISON for the people. The points raised in support of the motion are as follows: 1. That the indictment was framed under the law of 1852, while the crime was committed in 1860, and the indictment being defective, owing to changes in the law between the periods named, a conviction, under the circumstances, would be void. 2. That the Court, as at present constituted, has no jurisdiction to pass sentence, not being the Oyer and Terminer at which the prisoner was convicted. 3. That the District-Attorney peremptorily challenged a juror without assigning any cause. The Court will probably render a decision on the motion to-day. If adverse, the prisoner will be sentenced.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our dispatches from Harrisburgh state, that at last accounts the rebels were within four miles of Carlisle. Gen. KEIFE, in command of the small National force there, had drawn his men up in line of battle, prepared for an attack. The enemy was expected to reach Carlisle before night, but for some reason did not make his appearance. McConnellsville was entered by the rebels in force on Wednesday night, at 8 o'clock. Their advance was met by the 12th Pennsylvania cavalry, who fell back after a brisk skirmish. A militia regiment also fell back somewhat precipitately; but an independent company, commanded by a Capt. WALLACE, took position in the mountains, and bushwhacked the rebels with great success, killing a number of them. He is supposed to have finally retreated over the mountains. It was believed in Harrisburgh, last night, that unless the rebels appeared at Carlisle in very heavy force, Gen. KEIFE would give them battle. Fugitives—farmers and contrabands—were arriving in Harrisburgh in large numbers.

We have this morning some startling statements relative to the position, strength and intentions of the rebel army under LEE. A letter received in this City yesterday from Washington, says that LEE has his whole army, one hundred and twenty-five thousand strong, in the immediate vicinity of the Potomac, while Richmond is garrisoned by twenty thousand men from Bragg's army, commanded by BRAGG in person—he having arrived there on the 17th inst. Information received in Baltimore yesterday from Western Maryland is of similar import. LEE is said to have passed through Winchester on Friday, the entire rebel army then being in motion, 100,000 strong. EWELL was at Hagerstown on Monday, and his corps marched on Tuesday for Pennsylvania. LONGSTREET was about crossing the Potomac, and was to be over by Wednesday. According to rebel authority, HILL's forces are to occupy Gen. HOOKER's attention until the main body of the rebel army is well on the way, when LEE will move rapidly North, having in the meantime supplied himself with fresh horses from Maryland and Pennsylvania. He expects to capture Harrisburgh almost without opposition, when he will move at once on Philadelphia. Further than this the rebel programme is not at present disclosed.

Information reached Washington yesterday that EWELL's forces, comprising the left wing of LEE's army, passed through Hagerstown, Md., on Tuesday, direct for Pennsylvania. The forces were estimated to be from 20,000 to 25,000 strong. It was also understood that LONGSTREET, in command of the right wing, was crossing the Potomac on Wednesday, below Williamsport, and that the main body of A. P. HILL's forces, the centre of LEE's army, was somewhere between Winchester and Martinsburgh, moving toward the river.

We learn from the Baltimore American, that the garrison at Maryland Heights has been placed under command of Gen. HOOKER, and instead of being isolated, now forms the right wing of his army. This is virtually a strongly posted reinforcement.

Our special dispatches from Frederick give us some further insight into the rebel movements. There is no longer a doubt that they are on the north side of the Potomac in heavy force, and it appears that they are advancing into Pennsylvania in three columns, the centre one of which is under command of Gen. EWELL in person. They crossed the Potomac at four points—Williamsport, Hancock, Shepardstown and Antietam Ford. Each of the advancing columns is followed by immense wagon trains, most of the wagons being empty, indicating pretty clearly the character of the movement. The country is being ravaged on all sides for supplies, especially of horses and cattle.

An official report of the recent raid into East Tennessee is published. It was led, it appears, by Col. S. H. HAUNDERS, and not by Col. CARTER. He struck the railroad at Lenoirs, and destroyed it up to Knoxville, fourteen miles. He then made a demonstration against Knoxville, so as to draw the rebels from above, and then started for Strawberry Plains, seventeen miles above Knoxville, where he again struck the road. He burnt the State Creek bridge, 312 feet long; the Strawberry Plains bridge, 1,600 feet long, and the Massey Creek bridge, 525 feet long, captured three pieces of artillery, 200 boxes of artillery ammunition, over 500 prisoners and 1,000 stand of arms, and destroyed a large amount of salt, sugar, flour, meal, saltpetre, and one saltpetre manufactory. He returned through Smith's Gap, and reached Boston, Whitley County, Ky., on the 22d inst. He reports the rebel force in East Tennessee as larger than supposed.

The pirate Tacony, during her short career, has already burned between twenty and thirty vessels. On Sunday last she destroyed the ship Byzantium and the bark Goodspeed, besides a number of fishing vessels.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen, at their meeting yesterday, adopted a resolution, offered by Mr. FARLEY, inviting City Inspector BOOLE to continue to participate in the proceedings of the Board, and allowing him all the privileges of membership, except that of voting. This resolution was adopted, Mr. McCOOL only voting in the negative. Alderman HAVEMEYER, on Mr. BOOLE's entering, escorted him to the Chamber, where he thanked the Board for the honor they had paid him and resumed his former seat. This action will prevent Mr. BOOLE's continuing to be an Alderman, or participate in the discussions of the Board. A communication from him as City Inspector, stating his intention to perform his duties faithfully and energetically, and to give unremitted attention to the paramount duty of cleaning the streets and removing the garbage, was received and ordered to be printed in the minutes. Resolutions to donate $5,000 to the Home of the Good Shepherd and a piece of land to the German Hospital were passed over the Mayor's veto. The Comptroller's report of City finances for 1862 was presented and ordered to be printed. The Board adjourned to 1 P. M. on Monday, but afterward met specially at 4 o'clock, when a resolution appended to a report from the Committee on National Affairs was adopted, requesting the Comptroller to issue the $1,000,000 worth of bonds authorized by the Common Council for the Municipal Harbor Defence Commission, that the Commission may forthwith take steps to improve the City defences. A resolution by Mr. FARLEY, directing the Committee on National Affairs to confer with Gov. SEYMOUR and Senator MORGAN, of the State Harbor and Frontier Defence Commission, to ascertain what they have done or are going to do for New-York harbor, was also adopted. The resolution to annul the Broadway Railroad grant to the Harlem Railroad Company came in from the Councilmen, and was concurred in by 11 to 5, under the operation of the previous question, after slight discussion. Adjourned.

Hon. ERASTUS A. CORNLING yesterday addressed the Committee on National Affairs on the subject of the need of preparing strong defences to the harbor. Major GEORGE W. BALTWIN followed Mr. CORNLING in a few remarks of the same purport. Both urged the most prompt action.

The Comptroller yesterday made his annual report, for the year 1862. It is a very weighty document, but its great feature of the year's expenses and receipts, may be stated as follows:

Balance in Treasury, Dec. 31, 1861	$2,768,633 38
Receipts for 1862	15,762,277 43
Total	$18,560,889 80
Payments for 1862	16,826,917 68
Balance Dec. 31, 1862	$1,732,011 12

At the sixth annual regatta of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, which took place yesterday, the Katie-Did and the Lenora were the winning boats.

Official documents at the State House show that Massachusetts has contributed toward the suppression of the rebellion 80,000 soldiers in addition to the 10,000 recruited for the navy within the limits of the State. On three years' men 67,299 were enlisted, which is an excess of 6,446 over the calls made upon the State. Total number of nine months' men enlisted, 17,747, which is 1,333 less than the number called for, but this is more than made up by the three months' men sent forward. Add to this the recruits to the heavy artillery, and the present excess of the State over all calls will exceed 7,000.

The unloading of the prize steamer Calypso was commenced at Philadelphia on Wednesday. As far as ascertained, the cargo consists of dry goods, drugs, coffee, sugar, and paper. It is thought that it will not prove as valuable as that of the Princess Royal or Cambria. The Government has not signified its intention to take the vessel, though it is expected to do so. The steamer is well fitted for a transport, and could be converted into one at but little cost. Her machinery is in excellent condition, her boilers having been but lately put into her.

Maj. RICHARD S. SMITH, late of the regular army, was on Wednesday inaugurated President of Girard College. Dr. NEHEMIAH, Mr. LUTHER MARTIN and Hon. RICHARD VAUX, took part in the introductory exercises, and Maj. SMITH delivered an elaborate inaugural.

An Orderly Sergeant of the Twenty-seventh New-Jersey regiment had his straps stripped from him, and was put under arrest by Col. MINTURN, at Wheeling, because he threatened to take his company and go home in case the regiment should be ordered to Harper's Ferry.

There was much excitement on the Stock Exchange on the Railway Share list, the speculative changes, especially in Hudson and Harlem, being frequent and quite violent. The closing sales were at a decline from Wednesday's market. There was no alteration in the rates for Money. Gold Coin was at one time up 14@2 ⅌ cent., on the Pennsylvania war rumors, but closed 144¼, against 143¾ on Wednesday. Exchange, 158 ⅌ cent.

Breadstuffs, Cotton, Petroleum and Whisky were in active demand, yesterday, at generally much firmer prices. A fair inquiry prevailed for Provisions, Tallow, Hay, Hops, Sugars, Molasses, Fruit and Fire-crackers. Most other articles were quiet. The Freight engagements were moderate; rates essentially unchanged.

The Trials of a Serving Man—A Hard Dilemma.

An alliance between a young reprobate and the broker against his "governor" is not an uncommon thing; but it is a ticklish arrangement, and requires discretion. These young blades have high notions, and it don't do for their business agents to be too free with them. It is not enough that Overreach should be very prompt in his supply of funds—not enough, even, that he should keep very shady about filial obligations and all that sort of thing—he must make it a point to humor all the young fellow's foibles, and particularly to keep a civil tongue in his head at all times.

Mr. SPRUCE, of Liverpool, the Commercial Agent of the rebel Confederacy, has got into a terrible scrape for a little slip of this kind. Quite likely he may no longer have the handling of the young scamp's money. This SPRUCE was one of the first men in England to discover that he might make a good thing out of the rebellious JEFF. It had no sooner reached his ears that there was likely to be a break in the family, than he rushes up to him, hoping for his better acquaintance, and asking to be made useful. Understanding that Master JEFFERSON felt it his duty to "sail in" upon all the paternal property that might be lying about loose, he expressed himself highly gratified at such a display of spirit and honor, and thought he could lend a hand. The offer, of course, was taken up, for JEFF. needed friends badly enough. SPRUCE worked well. Probably no man in his line has served a better turn, and he made a very pretty thing of it. But, unluckily for SPRUCE, his long run of success turned his head a little, and one May morning he talked too fast about a certain little idiosyncracy of his very worthy patron. He replied to some rude fellow twitting him thereon, that, indeed, it was not exactly the thing—really quite a pity, but there was one comfort, it would not last long. This comes to the ears of JEFF.—he flies into a passion—there is a scene—the result is, we fear, that SPRUCE will never again see the color of JEFF.'s money. It really looks as if it was all up with SPRUCE.

What the "Commercial Agent" said was this:

"Slavery is a moral evil; it ought to abolished; the independence of the Confederacy ought to be acknowledged, because that is the way to cause the ultimate extinction of Slavery. It will be clearly allowable to the English Government to decline to acknowledge its independence, without express conditions on the subject of Slavery; the power of granting or withholding recognition is a power which the British Government might effectively use to the extirpation of this evil."

They no sooner heard of this in Dixie, than he was credited with all the Black Republican Exploits, dreams in this fashion.

Mr. SPRUCE may be a good Commercial Agent, but he is a most damaging and compromising friend. That private republican blue. Though Mr. SEWARD mollycoddles him, though the Secretary of the Treasury dangles him, though the State Department may get an appropriation for him, though we pay him in solid coin—yet, the Examiner, presuming in this matter, to be the organ of the Confederate people, will venture to declare to the British public that it is grossly deceived if it imagine that the slightest interference will ever be permitted, or so much as the faintest suspicion listened to, coming from abroad, bearing in the remotest way upon the domestic institutions of these States. England will recognize, or not, just as she pleases; but we will suffer none of her philanthropy in these parts."

This rebuff shows spirit. We like it. It shows off admirably when contrasted with the miserable hypocrisy of the money manager. And we may as well take occasion to say that the rebel leaders, bad as they are, notably have one redeeming quality. Wrong as may be their ends, they are frank in declaring them. They are too proud to dissimulate. Our artful Northern Copperheads have found this out to their cost. All of their pettering has been met with scorn. Every new pretence given out to the world that there was nothing exacting or exclusive in Slavery, and that it would be very glad to fellowship again with the North, on fair terms, has been answered with a new sneer at the idiocy that could so imagine. From the beginning the rebels have told the world, without reserve, that the very object of their Confederacy was to protect and perpetuate Slavery, which was a divine institution and a supreme necessity, and that their object could be secured in no other possible manner. In the face of the world they boldly set up Slavery as their idol; and slavocracy is as hallowed a system to them as theocracy ever was to the Hebrew people. There is no sacrifice they will not make for it, and for no consideration will they abate one iota of its supreme claims. Mad as they may be, there is yet a method in their madness. Wicked as they may be, they are yet above deception.

SPRUCE deserves his fate. Doubtless he was in a tight place. The necessity was upon him to say something. As an Englishman, he didn't dare to say that Slavery was a good thing, and yet, as a Commercial Agent, he couldn't afford to admit that his patrons were in the wrong. He tried to be an advocate, and yet, considering the meridian where he was, could not but be the "damaging and compromising advocate" the Richmond organ denounces. SPRUCE's mistake was that he ever lent himself to the Confederate business at all. It is not a business an Englishman, however shrewd he may be, can safely prosecute. Greater men than he have found out that it don't pay. Even the statesmen of England have learned the lesson. They have discovered the impossibility of speaking the British feeling toward Slavery, and at the same time keeping on good terms with the Confederacy. They have given up the effort entirely.

The simple truth is that there is an implacable antagonism between the spirit of the age and Slavery. It is not possible to ignore or get rid of this hard fact. It belongs to that class of realities which all human Governments have to accept and conform to—at which Cabinets may chafe, but against which they cannot turn without destruction. "Opinions," it was once well said by Lord PALMERSTON, "are stronger than armies." No Englishman can truly serve the Confederacy, and at the same time put a stigma upon the institution out of which it grew. Jeff. DAVIS can better forego all business accommodations and all complaisant talk about his belligerent rights, than to have Slavery placarded by his friends as "a moral evil." To discredit Slavery is to discredit the Government that springs from it; and even the acknowledgment of the political independence of the Confederacy would not go for much, if the moral contempt of the world was at the same time precipitated upon it. It is just as necessary that Slavery should have a moral recognition as that the Confederacy should have a political recognition.

Numbers of the Enemy.

Was Pennsylvania invaded two weeks ago by 7,500 or 50,000 rebels? Who knows? The Government at Washington evidently thought the latter number, or they would not have called for 120,000 volunteers to repel the invasion. But as yet there has been no evidence whatever that the danger menacing the North which called forth such herculean preparations for repulsion, came from over a couple of thousand of JENKINS' guerrilla cavalry.

It is no fair reply to say, there is evidence now that there are 15,000 or 40,000 rebels threatening Pennsylvania. Was this second invasion the one the Government foresaw and prepared against, or did the first invasion prompt the President's Proclamation?

The answer is the one of common sense. It was the intrusion of JENKINS' cavalry into Maryland and Pennsylvania that led to the call for 120,000 six months' volunteers by the War Department, and to the call for unlimited aid on all the adjacent States by Gov. CURTIN; that well nigh depopulated through fright the Cumberland Valley; sent a death shiver through Harrisburgh; stopped the factories of Pittsburgh and lifted for once the dark pall of smoke that otherwise might have veiled it for ages. It was a huge scare from a most ridiculously small danger.

We are told now, however, that a real danger is at hand; that the rebels are now coming in force and in earnest; that all the aid called for will be needed; and that the Pennsylvania cities may in reason prepare for a life and death struggle. This may be so, but how does the country know it? Does it rest on any better evidence than the first statements we had of the former raid? Does it come from flying contrabands, from breathless fugitives of the incapable MILROY's wagon train, from frantic countrymen fleeing in terror from rumors and phantoms in their rear? Only from such irregular and ridiculous sources as these have we yet heard anything of the numbers and purposes of the rebels in Maryland and Pennsylvania. On the ground of such information the country is convulsed and its energies of the Government and the States blindly put forth.

Has the Government no scouts and spies, through whom truthful information in regard to the invasion may be obtained? Money will also buy such service, and war cannot be successfully waged without it. There is no duty easier to a scout or spy than to penetrate the ranks of an invading army. The population is all new to the invaders. They cannot distinguish between a local and a transient person. They cannot restrain, nor confine, nor expel all the people they meet with on their march. Consequently they are subject to inspection and betrayal at every step they take, and an adversary General ought to know to an absolute certainty everything about the invaders that it is of consequence to know. There is culpable and criminal incapacity if such means are not resorted to, and the truth ascertained; for, without a knowledge of the truth of the numbers and purposes of the enemy, it is impossible to preserve the public dignity, or prepare for the public safety. When shall we know positively about the rebel invasion?

A Word to Pennsylvania.

The State of Pennsylvania has a population of three millions. She has something like a hundred thousand soldiers in the armies of the Union. She is believed to be threatened by a rebel force estimated at ninety thousand strong. It is, undoubtedly, very desirable that the army of Gen. HOOKER should save her from the danger of rebel invasion. But it is impossible at present, it seems, to prevent invasion altogether—though it does not seem unlikely that Pennsylvania may, for a time, be made the battle-field for contending armies.

Under these circumstances, and to prevent the bloody horrors that threaten the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, one would imagine that her people would rush to arms en masse to drive the invaders from her soil before they obtain a foothold upon it. Beside the large and splendid force she has contributed to the National army she ought still to be able to raise out of her population, at least two hundred thousand fighting men. One out of ten in the population is certainly not too large a draft to make from her resources in case of actual invasion. If there were two hundred thousand armed men on the soil of Pennsylvania awaiting the advent of LEE's army, we venture to say that that rebel would at once have given up the idea of capturing the State Capital, or quartering his army in the State.

It is now a fortnight since the rebels began their operations in Pennsylvania. There was but a small invading force at first, it is true, but the Pennsylvanians, like ourselves, believed there was a very large one, and might have been expected to act accordingly. But whether the first force was large or small, it gave the State a sufficient warning of what was, or might be coming. It showed that invasion was possible, and with the facts before them and us, neither they nor we had any right to act otherwise than if it were sure.

We are amazed at the apathy that seems to prevail among the people of Pennsylvania. Panic and apathy, apathy and panic, are the burden of the successive telegrams and letters that reach us. At the first appearance of JENKINS, the whole State seems to have been thrown on its back,—we are glad it did not fall on its belly. When he disappeared, they rubbed their eyes and fell again into unconcern. When he reappeared, they were once more struck. And now that they have had time to gather up their wits and brace themselves for work, we see those of them who cannot be said to be altogether apathetic, engaged in paltry arguments as to whether their term of service shall be a week or two, or a month or two, more or less.

The fortnight they have already lost has been invaluable to the enemy. It should have brought at least a hundred thousand armed Pennsylvanians to Harrisburgh. Within four days after New-York had heard the news of the invasion, this State had sent nineteen regiments to help our southern sister—fifteen of which were from this City. We have not heard of fifteen regiments being sent from Philadelphia, nor half of fifteen, nor five. We doubt if all Pennsylvania has yet fifteen regiments in the field. We do not say this invidiously. This is no time for invidious feelings or remark. The metropolis will send fifty regiments, beside the fifteen already sent to Pennsylvania, if she needs them. But we should like to see a more patriotic, energetic, warlike feeling in Pennsylvania, when she is invaded. We hear painful tales of the rebels harrying the farmers, plundering the towns, and galloping to and fro at their pleasure. Yet even this does not seem to arouse the State—nor even the neighborhoods which the rebels are ravaging. We even hear of old military companies disbanding for fear they shall be called to the field. Our Harrisburgh correspondent of this morning mentions that sixty men have enlisted from that neighborhood, where there are twenty-five thousand people.

What is the cause of this? Is it fear of the rebels, or confidence in HOOKER's army, or indifference? Fear of the rebels would be pusillanimous and disgraceful in a populous State like Pennsylvania. It is well to have confidence in HOOKER's army, but events have proved that it will not do to confide entirely in it for the defence of the North.

We call on the Pennsylvanians to wake up, arm, organize, and help to drive the rebels at once from their soil. But perhaps it is hardly worth while to call, when even the trumpet of invasion does not wake up the State.

WORK FOR MILITIA MEN.—The rebels talk wildly about marching through Pennsylvania. Probably they will not try it. They profess great contempt for the militia troops that may be sent against them. We hope their contempt will not be justified by events. Even if the State cannot at once organize a great army to stand them, the people might do much to make the march of a rebel force for any distance impossible. If regiments and companies of cavalry and infantry will everywhere hover around and fall upon the front and flank of the force attempting to advance, it will not advance very far. It would be a comparatively easy matter for an army to march through the South after the main rebel army is defeated, for the South is nearly exhausted of fighting men. But not so with any Northern State. Even now, without a single great battle, we believe that twenty thousand Pennsylvania militia, horse and foot, aided by an equal number of New-Yorkers, could drive into Virginia all the rebels on this side of the Potomac by simply operating in the way we have suggested.

New-Jersey and The Crisis.

The promptness with which Gov. PARKER, of New-Jersey, responded to Gov. CURTIN's recent call for aid to repel the invasion of Pennsylvania, drew forth, as it deserved, very general commendation, in which the TIMES was happy to join. On the 22d inst. Gov. PARKER issued a proclamation, calling back all the troops he had dispatched to Pennsylvania, to receive their discharge.

This later action of Gov. PARKER has been receiving severe censure, especially the language of the proclamation, which alleges that "the emergency no longer exists," to meet which they were summoned to the field; and a paragraph appeared in the TIMES yesterday, asking for an explanation of Gov. PARKER's course.

As the action of the New-Jersey Executive was highly creditable in the first place, it would not be just to withhold the explanation given of the action that has followed, which is this: The call on Gov. PARKER for aid came from the Governor of Pennsylvania, and not from the National Government. The President did not include the State of New-Jersey in his Proclamation calling for 100,000 six months' volunteers. The forwarding of New-Jersey troops to Pennsylvania was simply the act of one State voluntarily helping another State in an emergency. Gov. PARKER acted under the State laws of New-Jersey, and under them the militia cannot be called out for over sixty days, except in case of the actual invasion of New-Jersey. When, however, the New-Jersey troops reached Pennsylvania, they were refused acceptance unless they would be sworn into the United States service for six months, under the President's Proclamation. The Governor of Pennsylvania moreover instructed his transportation agents at Philadelphia to forward no troops to Harrisburgh who would not enter the United States service under the six months' call. This was not what the New-Jersey troops had offered to do, nor what Gov. PARKER had called on them to do, nor what he had any authority by State law to require them to do. And therefore he ordered them home, the entire expense of his volunteer services, it seems, falling on the State of New-Jersey.

The expression in Gov. PARKER's Proclamation, that "the emergency was past" to meet which the New-Jersey troops were offered, was justified by the dispatches from Pennsylvania on the 22d inst., the date of the issue of the proclamation. It was announced on that day that all the rebels had withdrawn from Pennsylvania, and that no further use remained for the troops that had been hastened forward to repel the invasion of that State.

How to Meet Danger.

It is no discredit to any community to be "alarmed" by the announced approach of the public enemy. The discredit and the disgrace consist in remaining "alarmed" after time has elapsed and been unimproved for ascertaining the extent of the danger, and preparing to meet it. The two Cities of Harrisburgh and Pittsburgh, Penn., at the present moment present a striking contrast of the extremes of good and bad conduct of communities in the presence of danger. When Harrisburgh was first wakened from its dream of peace, and assured that the rebels were approaching, scenes of the wildest panic and confusion ensued. The utmost exertions of Gov. CURTIN and Gen. COUCH were put forth almost without avail to rally the people of the place to the duty of self-defence. Their prevailing emotion was that of terror, manifested in offers to dispose of goods and property at any price, and in efforts to flee the town in cars, carriages and on foot, to some unknown and unthought-of place of safety.

The impossibility of escaping kept the mass of the people at home—the prompt succor of New-York and New-Jersey regiments soon gave them a sense of safety. But then, instead of gratitude and hospitality toward their defenders, there was exhibited only a spirit of speculation and extortion in trade—a desire to "make something" out of those who had left their business and their homes to protect them—the volunteer soldiers who were bearing muskets and digging in the trenches being charged scandalous prices for everything they bought in Harrisburgh. Time passed and the danger waned; and the Capital of Pennsylvania felt safe and grew valorous. But sudden danger loomed up again; the icy indifference of the Harrisburghers sent home disgusted many of their generous protectors; and now the Keystone Capital is in as great a panic as before, and the Patriot and Union (heaven forgive the sacrilege of title!) is questioning whether it is better "to fight the enemy or surrender." It is not known whether the force a second time threatening Harrisburgh consists of "4,000" or "15,000" rebels. But supposing it to be, as it is nearly always found in such cases—about one-fourth of the minimum number—we are quite clear it is the duty of the Patriots and Unions of Harrisburgh to run up the white flag and "surrender."

The conduct of the people of Pittsburgh affords honorable relief to the sorry picture of the State Capital. Pittsburgh was deeply stirred by the rumored approach of the rebels, but confusion reigned only for a day. Immediately fortifications were laid out, on the adjacent hills, and citizens by the thousand went out willingly to work on them. The subsequent news of the first alarm did not stop the zeal of all for self-defence, but the works went on steadily toward completion. The second alarm of an advancing enemy did not, therefore, unhinge the Pittsburghers or suggest the idea of capitulation, but led to more extensive and vigorous preparations for defence. By general consent, the stores of the City were closed for one week, (the foundries and factories had previously been mostly closed,) and nearly every one went forth to work on the fortifications or to drill for their defence. For several days past there have been from eight thousand to ten thousand men working on the forts and trenches; and Pittsburgh, from its admirable natural situation for defence, must soon become one of the most strongly fortified cities in the country. It would be well for their own dignity and honor if the people of Pennsylvania generally should emulate the example of the Iron City.

THE NEW BROOM.—The elevation of Mr. BOOLE to the office of City Inspector, has been received with singular favor by all parties, people and papers. Few men have reached the purple of office amid more general acclamations. Something of this is due to the belief that Mr. BOOLE is acquainted with the duties and dangers of the office, and will discharge the one and avoid the other to the best of his ability. But perhaps more is to be ascribed to the popular respect for the old saying, that a new broom sweeps clean. The virtues of a besom may not be apparent in every walk of life, but in our public promenades they are very conspicuous, and it is not a sweeping assertion to say that, in him who inspects the thoroughfares, the virtues aforesaid are all important. Mr. BOOLE is our new broom, and it is confidently hoped that he will cleanse the foulness of the Metropolis, and once more make it fresh and wholesome to sight and sense. In what way Hercules BOOLE proposes to set about "his wonders to perform," does not yet appear. Perhaps those dirty and dusty dragons, the sweeping-machines, will once more make their appearance in the streets, scattering confusion and pulverized trap-block among the store-keepers, and bringing comfort to the hearts of the curious in cleanliness. Or, about midnight, we may again behold in Broadway, as of yore, a creature of vaguely bucolic instincts, bearing in his hand a watering-pot, and in an idiotic horticultural effort, vainly endeavoring to cultivate Belgian pavement. In whatever way the broom may make its mark, we shall be content, provided it sweeps clean.

THE TACONY.—If to no one else, it will be a matter of delight to Secretary WELLES to learn that a large United States steamer was seen cruising off Chatham on Wednesday last. Only a couple of days previous the rebel brig Tacony had committed a series of daring depredations in that vicinity. With a celerity that could hardly have been expected, the Secretary of the Navy succeeded in getting a cruiser to the spot just two days after the pestiferous little craft had taken her departure. The large United States steamer will doubtless enjoy the soft Summer breezes of her new cruising ground, but we doubt if the pirate will be much disturbed by her presence. The most remarkable results may be anticipated from locking the safe after the spoons have been stolen. There is, of course, a strong probability that the robbers will continue to hover round the place.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25.

The newly-appointed Consul to Chee Foo was captured by a rebel pirate recently on his way to China. All the Consular property—books, forms, stationery, &c.—was burned with the ship.

REBEL OUTRAGES.

Major HIGGINSON, like Capts. HALLECK, MASS and others, received his worst wound after he was disabled, and while lying flat on his face, apparently dead—a rebel Captain deliberately shooting him in the back.

VALLANDIGHAM.

The Vallandigham Relief Committee, fifteen in number, bored the President to-day with various and singular reasons why the sentence which makes an exile of their gubernatorial candidate should be remitted. Mr. LINCOLN simply requested the crowd to reduce their views to writing.

NOT KILLED.

Capt. WASHINGTON, who commanded the Thirteenth regular infantry at Haines' Bluff, was not killed, as reported, but was severely wounded. He is on his way home.

NOT TRUE.

It is not true, as stated, that the Adams Express Company refused, to-day, to receive any valuables for transmission North.

Measures Taken to Capture the Tacony.

BOSTON, Thursday, June 25.

At a meeting of the underwriters and merchants to-day, a liberal sum of money was contributed and a Committee appointed to purchase or charter vessels to capture the rebel privateers. A dispatch from Secretary WELLES was read, to the effect that Government would accept any vessel or vessels that the merchants might tender, and would arm them at once and furnish everything necessary for the cruise, being willing to commission such persons for commanders as the merchants would recommend to Commodore MONTGOMERY.

Vermont Democratic State Convention.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Thursday, June 25.

The Democratic State Convention will be held in this place to-morrow. The weather is fine, and appearances indicate a pretty full attendance. JAMES BROOKS and other New-York gentlemen are advertised to speak. It is judged, this evening, that the nominees of the Convention will be as follows: For Governor, Hon. THOMAS P. REDFIELD, of Montpelier; for Lieutenant-Governor, E. A. CULVER, Esq., of Rutland; for Treasurer, R. McK. OTSELY, of Bradford.

The National Finances.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 25.

The General Subscription Agent reports the sale to-day of $1,402,650 five-twenties, by the various agencies in the loyal States. Bonds are being delivered to June 1. The uncertainty which still environs the rebel movements in Pennsylvania and Maryland has the effect of lessening the volume of sales, but the number of local subscriptions is peculiarly gratifying.

Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Thursday, June 25.

The following is the calendar of the Court of Appeals for Friday, June 26:

Nos. 20, 30½, 35, 37, 46, 120, 121, 122, 123 and 124.

THE PRIVATEER TACONY.

FURTHER DEPREDATIONS BY THE PIRATE.

Destruction of the Ship Byzantium, the Bark Goodspeed, and Four Schooners.

HYANNIS, CAPE COD, Thursday, June 12.

A Wellfleet schooner arrived here last night. She brings the crews of the fishing schooners Morange, Elizabeth Ann, Rufus Choate and Eagle, all burned by the Tacony. They report that on Sunday last the Tacony burnt the ship Byzantium, Capt. Robinson, from London, May 15, of and for New-York, and the bark Goodspeed, Capt. Dunton, from Londonderry May 20, for New-York. The crews were all sent to New-York in the schooner Florence. The Tacony has burned seventeen vessels since the 10th instant.

The Byzantium rated A No. 1, was built at Thomaston, Me., in 1856, and owned by THOMAS DUNMAN, Esq.

The Goodspeed rated A1½, was built at East Haddam, Conn., in 1854, and owned by Messrs. STORRS, CHADERDON & Co.

The Governor of St. Croix and the Alabama.

An agent of the so-called "Confederate States of America" at St. Croix purchased a large quantity of coal early in the present month for the Alabama, whereupon the Governor of the Island informed him that it would not be permitted to be taken away by that vessel. The fire-eater's reply was that "Capt. SEMMES would come and take it." His Excellency's answer was an imperative order to immediately remove the coal three miles inland. A costly undertaking in the Antilles!

THE WAR WITH THE SIOUX INDIANS.

Departure of the Expedition—Its Destination and Strength—Gen. Sibley's Staff.

Correspondence of the New-York Times:

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA, IN THE FIELD, CAMP PEPE, Friday, June 12, 1862.

After a series of almost interminable delays, caused by the nature of the expedition in which we are engaged, we may be said to be fairly on the "war path." One column of our army is ascending the Missouri, with all the rapidity that dull and sluggish stream will admit of, and our own division is under marching orders for the 15th instant. Your correspondent left St. Paul on Saturday the 9th inst., in Company with Brig.-Gen. SULLY and Staff, and made a rapid march, under an escort of cavalry, to this place. Nothing of startling interest occurred along our route until we reached Fort Ridgely, where we saw a real live Sioux in confinement—probably the last of his tribe left in this State within proximity to whites, or south of the line of their old reservations. The situation of this fellow is rather an unfortunate one. He left the State over a year ago, before these troubles in this section had occurred, in company with a white man rejoicing in the euphonious cognomen of BULLY WELLS. The two strayed away beyond the borders of the State, into a country never frequented by the Dacotahs save in times of profound peace, and here they passed the Summer in hunting, and the Winter in trapping, until they became absolutely burdened with furs. During all this time, they had not heard a word in regard to the outbreak, and approached the settlements, on their return, with perfect impunity, and fearless, or thoughtless, of danger. Presently, being informed that the whites intended to kill them, and made aware of the true state of affairs, the Sioux was placed under military protection at Fort Ridgely, while BULLY WELLS proceeded to St. Paul. On our arrival at the fort, the Indian was brought before the General, to be examined as to his knowledge of the massacres. He was questioned through an interpreter, and in every respect substantiated the story of his confrère. His home was in Faribault, and he feared to return to it, and will probably accept a position among the scouts for the expedition. This man says he had a wife and child when he left home, but it has since transpired that his child is dead and his wife supposing him to have died, has married again, thus placing the poor fellow in a decidedly unfortunate position. That your readers may have an adequate conception of the strength of our forces in the field in this Department, I will say there are two columns employed in this expedition. One started from Sioux City, Iowa, and consists of 2,000 cavalry, one battery of artillery and a proportionate amount of infantry, under command of Brig.-Gen. SULLY. Our column is under command of Brig.-Gen. H. H. SIBLEY, and numbers three full infantry regiments, one battery mountain howitzers and twelve hundred mounted rangers. The two divisions will meet at a given rendezvous in Dacotah. The object of sending a part of our force up the Missouri being to cut off the retreat in that direction of the Indians. This will be by far the most formidable expedition ever sent against the Indians on this continent, and the peculiar nature of the country to be traversed and the impossibility of keeping communication open with a base of supplies, renders it necessary to carry an immense amount of commissary and subsistence stores. The enemy's scouts are all about us, and our every movement is known to them. Meanwhile our own scouts are not idle, and we have recent and reliable information that LITTLE CROW, the Chief who instigated the massacres of last Summer, is gathering his forces, and intends making a desperate stand at or near Devil's Lake, in Dacotah. The only way in which he can possibly evade us is by taking refuge in the British possessions, and thereby putting a stop to our pursuit of him. There are rumors afoot of an attempt at compromise between the Sioux, under LITTLE CROW, and the Chippewas, led by that arch villain, HOLE-IN-THE-DAY. It is hardly presumable that these rumors can be justified in fact; but the latter Chief is very slippery, and there is no doubt but he will avail himself of any opportunity to strengthen his power, and wreak vengeance upon the whites. Just before we left Saint Paul, HOLE-IN-THE-DAY came to headquarters, and with great pretended friendship, offered the services of 600 of his young men to accompany the expedition and join in the fight against his old enemies. This was a masterpiece of strategy on his part, and intended to force upon us the conviction that we have nothing to fear from the Chippewas. Of course his offer was promptly declined and the reason given, that our forces were amply able to punish all the warriors that could be brought against us. Much more depends upon the result of this expedition than is generally supposed by persons so far removed from the scene of our operations as most of your readers.

Nevertheless the future welfare of the Northwest is dependent upon the issue. Under ordinary circumstances, with no other war to distract attention from it, the extensive warlike operations in this vicinity would be a matter of intense interest to all parts of the country; but, as it is, the lesser excitement is absorbed by and swallowed up in the greater, and the one gains where the other loses its importance. It is well for this State that she has succeeded in having most of the red men removed from her borders. The Winnebagoes are gone, "bag and baggage." Two thousand Sioux have been transported, and the balance we hope to take care of this Summer. And thus if a successful issue shall crown our labors, and the balance of the Dacotahs be destroyed or driven out, we will then only have a few Chippewas to get rid of, and the thriving little "Star of the North" will soon assume the position among her sister States to which she is justly entitled.

If, however, our operations in this department should prove a failure, and by any means we are thwarted in our efforts to punish the fiends who have made desolate the homes of hundreds of our citizens, none may foretell the extent or consequences of such a misfortune. If the enemy is not overpowered at once, and forever, we may well fear the early transition of the scenes enacted last year, into tragedy of a nature even more fearful and sanguinary. There is already in this vicinity a considerable encampment of friendly Sioux, who are to be used as scouts; and they will undoubtedly be of great service to the expedition. Since I commenced this letter the order has been given to take up the line of march, and the head of our column is now in motion. By the time this letter reaches you we shall be well on our way from the prairie. Just previous to leaving St. Paul, the Brigadier-General Commanding issued a stirring order to his army, which you have already published.

This order was read upon parade to each regiment, and elicited general commendation. Upon arrival at this camp, Brig.-Gen. SULLY assumed command of the forces and announced the following as the composition of his Staff. As most of the officers are Eastern men it will probably be interesting to a portion of your readers to see their names in your columns:

[Extract from General Order No. 23.]

The Staff of the Brigadier-General is announced as follows:

Capt. H. C. Olin, Assistant Adjutant-General.
Capt. E. G. Atkinson, Assistant Com., Musters and Acting Ordnance Officer.
Capt. Douglass Pope, Aid-de-Camp.
Capt. Edward Corning, Assistant Quartermaster to expedition.
Capt. W. H. Forbes, Commissary to expedition.
Capt. W. M. Kimball, Assistant Quartermaster, assigned to special duty in charge of pioneer and pontoon train.
Lieut. E. B. Putnam, Aid-de-Camp.
F. J. Holt Beaver, A. Sinclair Pinadrew, Archibald Hawthorne, Volunteer Aids-de-Camp, with rank of Second Lieutenants.

Now that our column is in motion, there will doubtless be events of importance continually transpiring, of which your correspondent will keep you duly posted. FLANDRAU.

THE EXCITEMENT IN OHIO.

Resistance to the Enrollment in Holmes County—The Outbreak Suppressed by the Military.

From the Cleveland (Ohio) Herald, of Monday.

Provost-Marshal Capt. DRAKE, with a posse of men, on Sunday went to Napoleon to arrest four men known to belong to a party by whom Mr. ROBINSON, an enrolling officer, had previously been stoned out of town. These men were armed, and refused to surrender to be tried by Court-Martial, but on being assured of trial in Court, they submitted. One of the prisoners acknowledged that he belonged to a secret society whose members were sworn to protect each other from arrests. On their way to Cleveland several armed parties were met, who retired on explanation of the prisoners. At last a party of 150 armed men were encountered. These, coming up, ordered the prisoners from the wagon. They took revolvers from some of the officers, and after discharging, retreated them.

Surrounding Capt. DRAKE, with twenty rifles pointed at his breast, they informed him he should resign his office, that he should promise never to count again into their town, &c., &c., on pain of instant death. To all of which he replied, that a "compliance would be dishonorable; that another would be appointed. If you wish to murder me, you have it in your power." They then demanded his revolver. The Captain promptly replied: "You shall not have it. I will kill the first man who attempts to take it."

The officers were then let go. On the 12th and 13th instant, the enrolling officers were driven out of two other townships in Holmes County.

Marshal BIRX, on obtaining the names of the rescuers, returned to Cleveland, leaving Commissioner WARD to issue warrants for them. On Monday, the 16th, after the Marshal left, two men, one of whom had been in Napoleon on Saturday, and one on Sunday, 12th and 14th, brought authentic news to this effect: That 1,000 men were in camp about Napoleon, well armed with equitrebrifles and revolvers; that they had come from Holmes, Knox, Coshocton, Stark, and other counties; two or three were from the State of Indiana; that they were being organized into companies and drilling. Provisions were coming in by the wagon-load. Furloughs were being granted. Pickets were thrown out in every direction. Signal guns were placed, which, in two hours' time, would increase this force to 1,500 men. All were breathing defiance to the Government.

The Union men in the neighborhood had been disarmed. One German, for refusing to join them, had been taken from his house, a rope thrown over a limb to hang him, and he was only saved by the tears and entreaties of his wife and children. Under these circumstances prompt measures were deemed necessary to suppress the insurgents. Commissioner WARD went to Columbus on Monday evening, and reported the fact to Col. PARSONS, Provost-Marshal of the State, who promptly on Tuesday night dispatched a body of troops to the infected district.

The rioters, refusing to be warned, were fired upon and dispersed effectually.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette describes the suppression of the outbreak:

"Col. WALLACE, with about four companies of infantry and one section of a battery, arrived at the place where the mob was reported to be located, on the afternoon of the 17th. He sent forward Capt. MOON, with about forty men, to find the enemy and report. He discovered them on a farm owned by a man named JACKSON, on the road from Mount Vernon to Millersburgh, and three miles south of Napoleon. He charged on them and drove them rapidly retreating behind a high stone wall, well intended for a breastwork. Two were taken prisoners. A number of shots were fired by either party.

"Capt. MOON stationed his men in two parties at the opposite corners of a field, in front of the wall, while he returned to Col. WALLACE to report and have the whole force brought up, expecting a battle in front of the high wall. When the force came up they charged the wall, took seven prisoners, the rest fleeing over the brow of the hill and down into a thick woods. One man, named WM. BROWN, was hit by a buckshot, it passing through his leg above the knee; not so wounding him as to prevent his escape. He, however, satisfied with war and the error of his way, came into camp on Friday, gave himself up, and had the surgeon dress his wounds. About the same time GEORGE BUTLER, one of the insurgents, on horseback, came riding up to our men, giving them a sign, and anticipating an answer. They ordered him to surrender himself. Seeing his mistake, he turned about and rode off, our men firing upon him. A ball passed through his thigh. He, however, escaped.

"The artillery was brought into position to shell the woods, where it was supposed the mob was gathered; parties were sent forward to the ammunition train, but no evidence of them was found. The same evening two horses were taken, and another prisoner. This ended Wednesday's skirmish, with a prospect of fighting Thursday. Rumor, busy as usual, had with some degree of success induced us to believe that a force would come from Knox County, during the night, to aid the mob; and one of the prisoners stated that about 300 were in the woods east of us only half a mile, all armed and ready for fight.

"During Wednesday and Thursday, houses were found to be owned and inhabited (but then deserted) by members of this gang, large quantities of bread—army bread—and meat prepared for the camp, far beyond the necessities of a private family—designed, no doubt, for this gang. Soldiers remarked that that looked like Dixie, where the rebels had encamped, but been driven suddenly off. The boys helped themselves—taking a loaf each.

"Thursday, instead of battle, we had diplomacy. Old LAPPARTER and Col. FRANCE, from Millersburgh, came to camp, offered to intercede, use their influence, and, if possible, settle the matter up without further bloodshed. The terms required by Col. WALLACE were, that the rescued deserters should be delivered up, and also the rescuers as prisoners, to be delivered into the custody of the District Marshal for the Northern District of Ohio; also, no further resistance to the draft. The day was spent waiting for the result. LAPPARTER and FRANCE went back and forth, from the mob to camp, settling questions that were being raised. On Friday, a little before noon, the parties demanded, so far as could be found, were brought in and delivered up. Those that could not be found they pledged themselves should be delivered up to the authorities. These leaders further pledged themselves and their honors that there should be no further difficulty, and that the draft should go on unmolested, and that hereafter deserters be taken without opposition."

GOLD.—The schooner G. S. Adams, Capt. CRASE, which arrived yesterday from Greytown, Nicaragua, has on board $20,000 in gold, belonging to the passengers, which was taken from the mining districts of Chontales, Nicaragua.

GEN. MCCLELLAND'S REMOVAL.—Gen. GRANT has removed Gen. JOHN A. MCCLERNAND from the command of a corps in the Army of the Mississippi. Gen. MCCLERNAND ranked next to Gen. GRANT in that army, his Major-Generals' commission dating from the battle of Fort Donelson. He has not been a favorite with the regular officers of the army, and was blamed, we do not know with what measure of justice or injustice, for the failure before Vicksburgh on the 22d of May. We should not be surprised if the immediate cause of the removal of Gen. MCCLERNAND was the publication of an order of congratulation to his corps relating to their exploits, in which there were observations on the affair of the 22d of May susceptible of an unmilitary construction.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Letter of Rev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain of the 107th New-York regiment:

NEAR AQUIA CREEK, March 4, 1862.

Owing to the great exposure and terrible decomposition after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostrated and very sick. My stomach would not retain medicine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. DRAKE, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

Rev. E. F. CRANE, Chaplain.

Letter from the Rev. N. S. GILES, St. Clairsville, Pa.:

GENTLEMEN: You were kind enough, on a former occasion to send me a half dozen bottles of Plantation Bitters, for $3 50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of those Bitters, I desire her to continue them, and you will please send us six bottles more for the money inclosed.

I am, very truly, yours,

N. S. GILES, Pastor German Reformed Church.

SOLDIERS' HOME, SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, CINCINNATI, OHIO, Jan. 15, 1862.

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvelous and gratifying.

Such a preparation as this is I heartily wish in every family, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."

WILLARD'S HOTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22, 1861.

GENTLEMEN.—We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house. Respectfully,

WHAT TO EAT, AND HOW TO COOK IT. Containing Over One Thousand Receipts, Systematically and Practically Arranged, to Enable the Housekeeper to Produce the Most Difficult or Simple Dishes in the Best Manner. BY PIERRE BLOT, Late editor of the Almanach Gastronomique, of Paris, and other Gastronomical Works. 1 vol. 12mo, cloth, $1.

No matter how inexperienced some of our housekeeping readers may be, by carefully following our directions they will be able to live as well and economically as possible, and a few days a dinner in an orderly manner as any reward could do.

In our directions, gastronomy is blended with economy, and although everything prepared according to these directions will be in the highest and best style, it will still be cheaper than if prepared in the poorest way, as nothing will be wasted, and the best of everything used will be bought.

This book will be proved to be simpler than many, if not all other Cook-Books. It contains more receipts, and is in accordance with the advancements of the present age.—Extract from Preface.

LAKE ERIE AND PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY.

FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND BONDS.

The Lake Erie and Pacific Railroad Company, in the State of Indiana, hav offer for sale their entire issue of $200,000 First, and only, Mortgage Bonds, 7 years, seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in the City of New-York.

These bonds are secured by a DEED OF TRUST, constituting the FIRST and ONLY lien upon the entire Road, its franchises, appurtenances, rolling stock, &c.

Its route is along the White Water Valley, from Rushville to Union, a distance of about sixty miles, and passes through the richest, best cultivated and most densely populated portion of the State of Indiana.

The road is the CENTRAL SECTION of the otherwise complete TRUNK LINE, connecting the great Southwest at LOUISVILLE, Ky., on the Ohio River, and at an early day with TOLEDO and SANDUSKY, on Lake Erie.

The Company is wholly without debt (should its coupon debt) and being strong in its local traffic, and connecting with roads that must necessarily largely increase the volume of its revenues, the BOARD OF DIRECTORS, with great confidence, invite the attention of capitalists to these securities, believing that they offer an opportunity for a first-class railroad investment, that which, in their judgment, there is not better to be had.

The published exhibits of the Company, together with a map showing the locality and adjustment of the Road, can be had from either of the Trustees of the Deed of Trust, in this City, named below, and from either of whom the bonds may only be to be had.

THE RAID INTO EAST TENNESSEE.

OFFICIAL REPORT FROM COL. SAUNDERS.

Destruction of Important Bridges and Large Quantities of Stores.

Three Pieces of Artillery, a Quantity of Ammunition, 1,000 Stand of Arms, and 500 Prisoners Captured.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, June 25.

The following dispatch has been received by Major-Gen. BURNSIDE from the expedition sent into East Tennessee:

BOSTON, June 23.

I arrived here with my command at 11 o'clock this morning. I struck the railroad at Lenoir, destroyed the road up to Knoxville, and made a demonstration against Knoxville, so as to have the troops drawn from above. I then destroyed the railroad track, and started for Strawberry Plains. I burnt the Siete Creek Bridge, 312 feet long, and the Strawberry Plain Bridge, 1,600 feet long; also, the Massey Creek Bridge, 325 feet long.

I captured three pieces of artillery, some 200 boxes of artillery ammunition, over 500 prisoners, and 1,000 stand of arms.

I destroyed a large amount of salt, sugar, flour, meal, saltpetre, and one saltpetre work, and other stores.

My command are much fatigued. We have had but two nights' sleep since leaving Williamsburgh.

The rebel force in East Tennessee is larger than I had supposed.

I did not attack London Bridge for reasons that I will explain.

At Massey Creek I determined to return into the mountains. I had very great difficulties that were unexpected. I found the Gap, through which I intended to return, strongly guarded with artillery and infantry; a force was also following in our rear.

I then determined to cross at Smith's Gap, which I did.

I will report more fully as soon as possible.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

S. H. SAUNDERS, Colonel Commanding.

FROM THE BLACKWATER.

Objects of the Recent Expedition—The Forces Engaged—The Results.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SUFFOLK, Va., Sunday, June 21, 1863.

The expedition that proceeded hence on the 11th of the current month, and returned to this point on yesterday, was not without both important prospects and results. Its leading object was to investigate the strength of and destroy the three leading strongholds of the enemy on the Blackwater River, all of which were within a distance of twenty-five miles from Suffolk. It was an additional object of the expedition, of course, to learn the number of the opposing forces immediately on the Blackwater. The expedition originally started out under command of Gen. CORCORAN, and consisted of the following named forces, which I am permitted to indicate: One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York Volunteers, Lieut.-Col. JOHN MCCOMBS commanding, occupying the post of honor in the column; the Ninety-ninth New-York, the Sixty-ninth New-York, the One Hundred and Eighteenth New-York, the One Hundred and Fifty-second New-York, the One Hundred and Twelfth New-York, the One Hundred and Sixty-fourth New-York, the One Hundred and Fifty-fifth New-York, the One Hundred and Thirtieth New-York, the One Hundred and Seventieth New-York, the One Hundred and Sixty-sixth Pennsylvania Militia, the Twenty-sixth Michigan Volunteers, the Eleventh Rhode Island Volunteers, the Fourth regular artillery, the First Delaware artillery, the gallant Thirteenth Indiana, (Gen. FOSTER's old regiment,) commanded by Lieut.-Col. DENIS, SPEAR's cavalry, and DUNN's mounted rifles. The force numbered six thousand infantry, in addition to the artillery batteries and mounted rifles. Gen. CORCORAN moved his command by way of the South Quay road, not, however, without directing the regimental commanders to discourage pillaging upon the enemy, or wantonly destroying private property. The remarks of Lieut.-Col. MCCOMBS, commanding the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York, to his regiment, near which I happened to be standing at the time, will serve to shadow forth the intent of Gen. CORCORAN in this regard.

Col. MCCOMBS, as the regiment was drawn up in line, very impressively said:

"An order just received from the General Commanding requires regimental Commandants to caution their commands against the many improprieties which too often occur while troops are marching through the country. Although I believe you fully understand your duties and responsibilities as soldiers of the Republic, yet there are always some unauthorized persons who straggle from the different regiments, and by their outrageous acts disgrace the army and our cause. Let it not be said there is one such in this regiment, but if there is, let him not do these things with impunity and cast opprobrium upon us all. The officers must know him, and he must be properly punished and dealt with. Private property will be taken possession of and destroyed through the proper authorities, whenever the exigencies of the service demand it, and no one is allowed to otherwise interfere with it. This is just and right, and by always observing this rule the regiment will never cast discredit upon itself or our cause."

The first point reached was the South Quay, after which Franklin and the Blackwater Bridge were successively visited, all of which points were severely chetted, for the purpose of drawing out the enemy. Each of the above-named places were evacuated, with the exception of a few sharpshooters, who had been warily left to guard the fords, and from whom our forces experienced considerable annoyance. All this accomplished, the troops returned to Franklin, for the purpose of making a reconnoissance toward North Carolina and Petersburgh. In attempting to cross the Blackwater, a passage it was not imperatively necessary to force, the fire of the sharpshooters came to be so galling, that it was wisely thought it would occasion too great a sacrifice of life, and one that would not be commensurate with the object sought to be attained. During the latter part of the expedition, the command was turned over to Brig-Gen. R. S. FOSTER, a splendid soldier, who, as Colonel of the Thirteenth Indiana, has displayed signal ability since his accession to the field. His commission, accompanied with the "single star," reached him but two days before he was ordered to join the forces as Commander. I regret to add that Capt. HAGG, a gallant officer of the Ninety-ninth New-York, and several privates, lost their lives by the hands of the unscrupulous sharpshooters. At one time it was rumored that Maj. ALONZO ALDEN, of the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York, had received a mortal wound. It was thought to be more than probable, when his fearlessness and daring upon the Edenton road, in the affair of the 24th of April, were remembered. The rumor, to the intense gratification of his friends (not a few) in the brigade, proved not to be well founded. Maj. ALDEN is recognized as belonging to a class of Union soldiers the fewer of whom we lose the better it will be for the Union cause. The troops throughout behaved well and elicited the favorable notice of the Commanding General. Among those who were conspicuously and honorably active, so much as to command the particular complimentary attention of the Generals, were the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York, DUNN's Mounted Rifles, One Hundred and Twelfth New-York and the Ninety-ninth New-York.

Matters of high military and public import are transpiring here just now, but to write of them in the week involve unfavorably the interests of the Government. All I am permitted to say is, let the enemy approach these fortifications if they are fully resolved to die in the last ditch.

THE SIEGE OF VICKSBURGH.

DIRECT FROM GEN. GRANT'S ARMY.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 25.

The Bulletin has the following dispatch:

CAIRO, ILL., Thursday, June 25.

A gentleman direct from the army besieging Vicksburgh furnishes us with most cheering advices.

Our army is sufficient to take the place.

Gen. GRANT's position against Gen. JOHNSTON is as strong as that of Gen. PEMBERTON against Gen. GRANT.

The indications multiply that the rebel army in Vicksburgh must shortly surrender.

The fire upon the city is very heavy and destructive. The rebel reply to our fire is not heavy, and is ineffectual.

Gen. JOHNSTON is believed to be mainly employed in preparations to defend the interior of Mississippi after the fall of Vicksburgh.

The rebel spirit of resistance in the Southwest is burning itself out in harassing but inconclusive warfare along the river.

THE SIEGE OF PORT HUDSON.

Correspondence of the Boston Journal.

BANK OF PORT HUDSON, Thursday, June 11, 1863.

The Nineteenth army corps still lays in the rear of the formidable rebel works. The works are thoroughly invested, any other event than that of an eventual surrender is impossible. Over a hundred pieces of ordnance—heavy siege guns and light field pieces—are in easy position to annoy the foe, and a battery of 9-inch Dahlgren guns has been placed in Gen. AUGUR's front, manned by marines, under command of Lieut.-Commander TEASY, of the Richmond, which is doing the rebels great damage. Two more batteries have also been erected—the one on the left is manned by the Thirteenth Massachusetts battery, Capt. HAMLIN—and the thundering missiles from these instruments are messengers of death and disaster to the Confederate army. A general bombardment is kept up day and night, allowing the rebels no rest or respite. The corn-mill inside the works and the commissary building have been burned or destroyed by our shell, and the six thousand men who fought us on the 27th ult. are depleted by death, sickness and desertion. Perhaps fifty prisoners have come in daily, mainly deserters who escaped from the rebel trenches, and came willingly inside of our lines. They bring tales of destitution and suffering, which lead one to wonder at the fanaticism with which many of the Southern soldiers cling to the cause of the Confederacy. Poor fellows! The mails have not reached them lately in Port Hudson, and they have not heard of GRANT's victories up the river, and the defeat of JOHNSTON's forces; so they still take heart from the hope that he is coming down to reinforce them. Theirs is a vain hope. Gen. PARKER sent over a numerous squad of men from Mississippi, who lurked in our rear a few days, but when Col. GRIERSON's cavalry and Gen. PARKE's infantry went out in pursuit, their location was not discovered.

There is a curious coincidence connected with this campaign. Port Hudson is defended by Major-Gen. FRANK GARDNER, of the Confederate States army. He was formerly a Captain in the Tenth United States infantry, which he deserted to join the rebel army. Among his comrades and messmates in the old Tenth regiment—like him, Captains in the line—were Gens. GEORGE DUNBAR and GOODMAN. The latter named are commanding in the besieging army. Perhaps when these three gallant Union commanders meet their old comrade inside the walls of Port Hudson, some old recollections will be revived. But GARDNER holds the ground tenaciously, and evidently don't want to see them. At the time of the secession mania, open disloyalty was talked among many of the officers then in the army. Capt. DUNBAR brought charges against nine officers of his regiment. Seven of them are now in the Confederate service.

Brig.-Gen. STONE, who had been ordered to report to Gen. BANKS, has arrived here with his staff, but has not yet been assigned to active duty. He will probably relieve Gen. DWIGHT in command of the left wing.

While Gen. BANKS and Staff were making a reconnoissance on the left of our army last Monday, Lieut.-Col. WM. S. ABBAT, Chief of Cavalry, was kicked by a horse, the blow breaking his left leg. The accident was not a dangerous one, but will for a few weeks deprive the army of one of its best officers, and the General of one of his best advisers.

In such an affair as that of the other day, it is but natural that many men should escape the death-dealing missiles of the enemy by a very narrow margin. Maj. PLUNKETT, of the Forty-ninth, is a fair specimen of a soldier—he stands six feet five inches in his stockings. He led his regiment on to the enemy's works after BARNETT and SUMNER fell wounded, and was a conspicuous mark for the enemy's fire, but escaped without a bruise. Out of eighteen officers of this regiment who went into the fight, eleven were wounded. But seven companies of the regiment were engaged, however. Company I, Capt. KEARY, and Company "F, Lieut. DARRAH, were detailed to guard an ammunition train, and Company G, Capt. WALKER, is at Baton Rouge, on provost duty. Color Sergt. THOS. BECK, of the Forty-ninth, a Berkshire six-footer, carried the colors bravely through the fight, under the hottest fire. He was twice censured by the Commander for going ahead too fast. He remained at the front with his colors flying, but did not receive a scar or scratch. This was a wonderful escape.

Capt. F. W. SMITH, Company I, Forty-eighth Massachusetts, who is reported slightly wounded in the ankle, had thirty-eight bullet-holes in his clothes when he was brought off the field.

Lieut. N. N. NEYES, Company F, Forty-eighth Massachusetts, was saved from a bullet wound by his sword accidently resting in front of his breast. A bullet struck the sword, and glanced away.

NAVAL.

MORE EXCITEMENT ABOUT THE PRIVATEERS.

The navy has once more been stirred up by the depredations of the privateers. Hardly had the steamers returned which were sent away a few days since, and reported their failure to discover the whereabouts of the pirates, than orders were received here to prepare once more all available vessels, and to charter every fast one to be had. The steamers Gertrude and Granite State, both captured prizes, are finishing rapidly at the Navy-yard, and will be sent to sea immediately. A tugboat was dispatched, on Wednesday evening, after the steam frigate San Jacinto, with orders to bring her back, and dispatch her after the Tuscany, but she was too far out to sea. Yesterday Rear-Admiral PAULDING succeeded in chartering the splendid ocean steamships Atlantic, Baltic, Star of the South, and others. The fleet arrived at the Navy-yard last evening, and will be outside the lights to-day. The new steam corvette Shenandoah has received her sailing orders at Philadelphia, and will join the chase; the bark Ethan Allen has gone from the Boston Navy-yard, and the new steamer Hanquah, built at East Boston, by BROWN & LOVELL, has been chartered for instant service. The splendid steam frigate Susquehanna, which accompanied the Niagara on the cable expedition, has been hauled alongside the wharf at the Brooklyn Yard to be fitted out; and, indeed, every vessel that possesses (any sea-going qualifications will be in the hands of the constructors and fitters-out for the next few days. The following is a recapitulation of the squadron now about to participate in the chase:

Name.	Description.	Where.
1. Atlanta	Chartered	New-York.
2. Baltic	Chartered	New-York.
3. Star of the South	Chartered	New-York.
4. Ethan Allen	Bark	Boston.
5. Shenandoah	Navy-built corvette	Philadelphia.
6. Hawquah	Steam corvette	Boston.

It was rumored last night that the Cambria, Black Stone and other crafts have been rechartered.

The Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy-yard has ordered Lieut.-Commander FILLEBROWN, Capt. NICHOLSON, of the Shamrock, Capt. COGGAN, late of the Connecticut, and other officers, to command these vessels and to use all possible vigilance in searching for the rebel pirates.

THE U. S. STEAMER SUMTER.

This vessel, whose sinking was reported yesterday by telegraph, was once the old Cromwell steamer Atlantic, and was built at Philadelphia in 1856. She was reported unseaworthy over a year ago, yet was sent to sea. Having been refitted, she was again dispatched from New-York some months since, and returned in distress on the 10th of April, but she was fitted up again, nearly all her officers endeavoring to leave her. The following is a list of her officers:

Acting Volunteer Lieutenant—Peter Hays.
Acting Assistant Surgeon—Wm. Mellon, Jr.
Acting Assistant Paymaster—A. B. Robinson.
Captain's Clerk—G. Frederic Randall.
Paymaster's Clerk—Wm. A. C. Steerk.
Surgeon's Steward—Herbert Nelson.
Engineers—Acting Second Assistant—Wm. F. Goff.
Acting Third Assistants—John Van Hagan, Richard Thall, and Charles Bennett.
Acting Ensigns—Geo. A. Patterson, Thomas G. Hargis, Thomas W. Spencer, Jacob L. Hayes.
Acting Masters' Mates—Charles H. Neill, Paul Boyden, Charles F. O'Neill, George Van Duser, John J. Allen, Jr.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Admiral DAHLGREN arrived here yesterday, and visited the Navy-yard, where he was received by Admiral PAULDING with the honors due his rank. He appeared in citizens' dress, which obviated the necessity of extending to him a formal reception.

Admiral FOOTE was no better last evening, and his friends and physicians despair of his recovery. It is said that the Secretary of the Navy will arrive in town to see him.

THE TURF.

Centreville Course, Hunting Park—Fastest Time on Record on a Northern Course—Boston and Franklin's 4-Mile Time Beaten by 6 1-2 Seconds.

The second day's races on the Centreville Course took place yesterday, and were well attended, the President of the Brooklyn and Jamaica Railroad superintending the arrangements of the trips, in person; in consequence of which every facility was extended to the visitors to the races.

The first race was a four-mile dash for a purse and stake of $700 for all ages, which was the best contested race and fastest time ever recorded on a Northern Course, and was won by Capt. MOORE's bay mare Idlewild, ridden by TOMMY FARRAR, who beat Mr. JOHN M. CLAY's bay colt Jerome Edgar, ridden by GILFEATHER, by only three lengths, in 7 minutes 26¼ seconds; Mr. FRANK MORRIS' chestnut colt Dangerous being under a strong pull at the Judge's stand in 7 minutes 30 seconds. The last three miles were done in the fastest time on record, viz.: 5 minutes 27¾ seconds. The track was in the most favorable condition. The following is a memorandum of previous races:

Fashion beat Boston on Long Island—time, 7.32¼; GILFEATHER riding the losing horse, as he has done in the present race, in which he has beat Boston's time. At the April meetings, on the Metairie course, at New-Orleans—which gives the horses a year's advantage, or 4 pounds in weight, over yesterday's race, as the ages always date from the May following that of the race meeting—the following four-mile races have been run under more advantageous circumstances in shorter time:

Lexington against time in.....7.19¾
Lexington beat Lexington in.....7.23¾
Lexington beat Lecompte and Rube in.....7.30

It will be easily understood, therefore, what excitement and interest this splendid race caused among the leading turfmen of the different parts of the United States, who were present in considerable numbers yesterday; and also the enthusiasm of the miscellaneous crowds of spectators in witnessing the contest between these fine horses.

The second race was for a handicap purse for all ages, for which six entries were made, only three of which started, namely, Mr. F. G. MURPHY's gray colt Gray Don, Mr. JOHN M. CLAY's bay colt Bill Davis and Mr. PHILO C. BUSH's brown mare Seven Oaks, and a prettier or more exciting race was never seen. The sale of $100 pools for choice of horses will indicate the rate of betting, as before the start Seven Oaks was the favorite at $50, Bill Davis fetching $37 50 and Gray Don but $20.

After the first heat, the $100 pools averaged as follows: Seven Oaks, $62; Bill Davis, $32, and Gray Don last of all, less than and before $17—Seven Oaks still being the choice against the field. But when the Gray made such a gallant dash to the front toward the last of the third heat, and won it, with the Oaks last, the rush to hedge off in the $100 pools was shown by the Don fetching $75; Davis, $20; and Oaks, $15.

THE FOUR-MILE DASH.

Idlewild was the choice in the pools at 100 to 20 against the field, and even between Jerome Edgar and Dangerous.

First Mile—Edgar took the lead from the start, having the inside, while Idlewild, who was outside, took the lead and inside from Dangerous, and in this position they passed into the second mile, with three lengths between each, at an easy pace in 1:59.

Second Mile—Edgar and Idlewild maintained their relative positions around the course, and passing the judges' stand in this way, with Dangerous full off behind, lengths in the first turn, opened the gap to eight lengths at the half, ten at the three-quarter pole, but made a fine brush up the home-stretch, and was but six lengths behind as he crossed the score—the two miles being done in 3:47¾.

Third Mile—Edgar increased his lead over Idlewild to four lengths on entering the turn, and to five lengths at the three-quarter pole, with Dangerous at least ten lengths still further behind; a splendid burst of speed placed Edgar leading by three lengths; and Idlewild six lengths in advance of Dangerous.

Fourth Mile—Idlewild closed up a length on entering the turn, when Dangerous fell off a length; at the half mile the leading horses maintained their relative positions, but increased the pace. A tremendous struggle now ensued, amidst the greatest excitement, as they entered the last turn going round; but an open length was between them at first, and they ran yoked part of the distance, and at the three-quarter pole Idlewild had begun to draw in front; the struggle down the home stretch being one of the most dashing bursts of speed which could be imagined, and ending in Idlewild passing the score three lengths in advance under a strong pull, the winner of the race, in 7.26¼, the last three miles being done in the shortest time on record, namely, 5.27¾. Both the other horses were pulled up also, when their riders saw that it was a hopeless task to expect to win.

RECAPITULATION.

First Race—A purse and stake of $700 for all ages; four-mile dash; closed with the following entries:

Thos. G. Moore's b. m. Idlewild, by Lexington, dam by Glencoe, 6 yr. old.....1

SECOND RACE.

Handicap purse for all ages, mile heats.

First Heat.—The Gray Don had the inside, and Seven Oaks the middle, who took the lead and track on entering the turn, the others being yoked together. At the half-mile, Oaks led Bill Davis two lengths, and but one length at the three-quarter pole, where the gray was four lengths behind. A gallant brush for the lead took place up the home stretch, ending in Seven Oaks winning the heat, Bill Davis one length behind, and Gray Don two more in the rear.

Second Heat—Was well contested throughout by Oaks and Davis, who ran almost neck and neck to the three-quarter pole, when Mr. CLAY's horse drew clear in front, and finally won by a couple of lengths; the gray, who had been five lengths behind at the half-mile, having reduced the gap by a splendid brush up the straight run to only one length behind Seven Oaks.

Third Heat—The gray led at the turn, but was lapped at the quarter pole by Davis—Oaks being five lengths behind. At the half-mile the Don drew in front, and increased his lead, finally winning the heat by a couple of lengths—Davis being three lengths in advance of Seven Oaks.

Fourth Heat—Gray Don took the lead from the start, with Bill Daus lapped on him till they passed the quarter-pole; at the half-mile a length was between them, and notwithstanding a persistent effort for the lead by Dams, Gray Don won the heat and race by a couple of lengths. Seven Oaks never approached the leading horses.

RECAPITULATION.

Second Race—Handicap purse, for all ages; mile heats; the following were entered:

Gray Don, g. c. by Hornpipe, dam by Chorister, 5 years old, 95 lbs.....3 2 1 1

We are indebted to PETER MCGRATH, Esq., of Kentucky and New-Orleans, who acts as one of the Timers in these races—for his courtesy in giving the times of previous four-mile races, as well as those of the present occasion. Mr. MCGRATH, who is well-known as a leading turfman of the South and Southwest, owns Mammona, now in Capt. MOORE's stables, as well as several other fine horses.

THE RACES FOR TO-DAY.

The first race to-day is mile heats, best 3 in 5, in which will run Mammona, Bill Davis and Gray Don. The second race is two-mile heats, in which Southerner, Fleetwing and Mr. CLAY's Lodi will run. These races will no doubt be hotly contested.

Sixth Annual Regatta of the Brooklyn Yacht Club.

The Sixth Annual Regatta of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, which came off yesterday, was a complete success both numerically and pecuniarily. The weather, which, next to the water, is the most important thing in a regatta, was decidedly favorable; a cool breeze blowing throughout the day from the southeast, rendered the atmosphere pleasant and lessened the effect of the sun.

According to previous arrangements, the fast and commodious steamer Rip Van Winkle was at De Forrest's wharf, near Fulton Ferry, to receive the members and invited guests. Only a limited number of tickets was issued, but by some way or other at least seven or eight hundred people were on board, and of these a majority were ladies, who occupy twice the space allotted to an individual. The steamer left her moorings at 12 M., sharp, ranching Gowanus Bay, the starting place, in half an hour. Here an animated scene greeted the view, the yachts been arranged in two rows, awaiting the signal to start, while the waters were bestudded with large and small craft of every build, from a small outrigged skiff to the large and handsome yacht. The Club-house, and other buildings in the vicinity, were handsomely decorated with flags, of both a national and international character, which contrasted pleasantly with the high green hills in the distance, and, all together, presented a very picturesque appearance.

The boats were arranged in the following order, and in which, at the given signal they started at 12:40:

FIRST CLASS.

Yacht Entered.	Owner.	Tonnage.	No.
1. Addie	R. Prandie	20	12
2. Annie Laurie	Wm. Mellonie	22	3
3. Katie-Did	———	16	15
4. Midnight	J. R. Waller	21	6
5. Restless	Jno. Jones	15	1
6. Dolphin	J. Sheridan	15	2
7. Ocean	J. White	15	10
8. Early Bird	(Mod'l) G. A. Conner	15	4

SECOND CLASS.

Name.	Owner.	Tonnage.	No.
1. L. F. Newman	J. Dunn	22	4
2. Sophia	H. Beesley	22.5	13
3. Arethuse	J. H. Barnitt	22.2	11
4. Laura	R. W. Whiting	22.12	4
5. Commodore	H. Beesley	27.10	6
6. Favorite	J. McClenahan	22.1	14
7. Metzerott	J. Fletcher	22.5	7

The start was effected with much ease, and the vessels having wooed the balmy breeze, each boat made much headway. Up as far as the Bay Ridge dock the contest was chiefly between the Addie and Annie Laurie, which were close together, but the breeze being stiffer at this point and the vessels having more room for their operations, the race became more general. The Annie Laurie attracted much attention by her beautiful sailing, and it soon became evident that she would be one of the winning boats. On nearing Fort Lafayette, whose grim walls and solitary sentinel presented no very inviting aspect, that vessel took the inside track—that is, went in between the fort and the shore, which apparently gave her a few minutes. After passing the buoy off this point, the Katie-Did overtook the Addie and gained considerably on the Annie Laurie, whose able Captain kept her up admirably. The second-class boats maintained nearly the same order as at starting, the Laura perhaps gaining a little on the Commodore. It was not until after the flag-boat off Coney Island had been passed, that the race between the second-class boats became exciting; then, having full swing, they flew across the water with the swiftness and gracefulness of a swan. When down in the lower Bay, the race was quite close between the Commodore, Nonpareil and Laura, which successively passed each other, the first-named boat having her mast taken short off; the other two maintained nearly the same positions. It was now almost impossible, even with the aid of the glass, to discern the numbers on the sails of the first-class boats, so that we were unable to get their positions, either going down or when rounding the Buoy 8, as the Rip Van Winkle left before they had all got by. On the way down, the hours were enlivened by Sanger's band, which discoursed some choice music. Several dances were improvised, and all had a good time generally. A gentleman composed of some 10 or 12 marines from the North Carolina, sang a number of patriotic and popular airs, much to the edification of the passengers.

On approaching the buoy, the Laura having got to the windward she managed to head off the Nonpareil, whom she led around the stake-boat, both yachts maintaining the same positions on the home-stretch. On the way back, the wind being in their favor, the race became quite animated, each Captain trying to out-manœuvre the other. The Narrows presented a rare scene, some forty or fifty boats with full sail, all coming up at the same time, completely hid the horizon from view, and plowing through the water, in which was reflected the rays of the setting sun, all eyes were strained to discern the racing boats, which were almost lost in the number of others following them.

In passing the home boat the Laura, which came in before the wind in a splendid manner, reached there at 4:31¾, followed by the others in this order: Nonpareil, Favorite, L. F. Newman, Sophia and Arethuse; of the first-class the Katie-Did and Annie Laurie came in first.

Below is the time-table, from which it will be see that the Katie-Did and the Laura were the victorious boats:

The Desperate Affair near Belfast, Me.

BELFAST, Me., Thursday, June 25.

GRANT and KNOWLES, the deserters, who shot McKENNEY, Chief of the Police of this City, on Sunday, while attempting to arrest them for horse stealing, were discovered in the woods yesterday by three of the posse sent in search of them. The desperadoes resisted, and a desperate and bloody affray took place.

A Mr. JENKINS, of Detroit, one of the posse, was instantly killed by a shot from a revolver in the hands of GRANT, who also succeeded in seriously wounding another man.

GRANT was finally killed by blows from a knife, and KNOWLES was wounded beyond recovery.

Chief of Police McKENNEY remains in a very critical condition.

The Illinois Legislature.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, June 25.

The Democrat, of this city, has a special dispatch from Springfield, Ill., to the following effect:

"A session of the Illinois Legislature was held yesterday, with the view of legalizing the Wabash Horse Railway, and testing the legality of the Governor's prorogation of the Legislature. The Democrats contend that the Assembly is still in session, having never adjourned. Four members of the House were present and two of the Senate. A Committee was sent to the Governor to ascertain if he had any communication to make. The Governor replied that he had nothing to say, and did not recognize the meeting."
